BRITISH LAUNCH TERRIFIC RAID ON BERLIN

Walters Turns Tigers Back 4 to 0 to Even Series

Cincinnati Now On Even Terms As Teams Await Finale Today

Leading Pitcher of National League Wins Second Game of Series and Hits Homer

By JUDSON BAILEY

CROSLEY FIELD, CINCINNATI, Oct. 7 (AP) — Bucky Walters, the wonder boy of the National League pitchers for two years, pitched and batted the Cincinnati Reds to a 4 to 0 conquest over the Detroit Tigers today and forced the 1940 World Series to its limit of seven games.

Just as he hurled three-hit ball to tame the Tigers in the second game of the series and level the standing last Thursday, Bucky today pitched a nearly flawless five-hit brand to strangle them into a shutout.

Walters Hits Homer

But almost more than his pitching, the 30,481 hopeful hometown fans goggled at the home run their hero hit over the left field wall in the eighth inning as a sort of disdainful parting gesture to Detroit.

This blow, the second homer Walters hit this year, only served to heap humiliation on the Tigers. It came off young Fred Hutchinson long after the Reds had sewed up the victory by shelling Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe off the mound in the first inning.

In two respects the struggle followed the pattern of the other series games—first that each rival alternates victory and second that the games usually are decided early and finish one-sided.

The Tigers banked heavily on Rowe repudiating his performance against Walters in their previous tangle, when he was knocked out by a five-run uprising in the fourth inning. Instead the same stuff that the Reds liked before they liked earlier today.

Bill Werber, the series' chief troublemaker for opposing pitchers, started the team up with a terrific liner against the fence in the first inning, good for a double. Mike McCormick sacrificed him to third and then Ival Goodman, Frank McCormick and Jim Ripple hit consecutive singles to send Rowe shuffling to the showers.

Werber scored on a hit by Goodman who raced home from second on Ripple's sharp shot to center.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7 (AP)—Kenneth Simpson, deposed as Republican national committeeman in a factional fight preceding the party's national convention, tonight was nominated for the congressional seat being vacated by Rep. Bruce Barton.

Germany May Have New Attack Method

BERLIN, Oct. 7. (AP)—A hint that Germany may have some new method of attack to spring against England was given today by a German military expert.

"First we used the blitzkrieg in France," he told a press conference. "It was a German patent. Then came the present type of attack, hammer blows against England.

"But who knows but there may be a third new method we yet may use?"

By means of the hammer-blow method, he continued, the German air force has destroyed progressively important docks, war materials, factories, gas and electric plants, railroads and supply depots.

"In these attacks hundreds and thousands of planes are being used," he said.

British Raid Big Area in Germany During Daytime

Report Hits Scored in Many "Invasion Ports" in France

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Oct. 7—British bombers carrying the war to Germany in a campaign to blast and cripple the Nazi war machine pushed home daring daylight attacks on German objectives on the "invasion coast" yesterday despite consistently bad weather, the air ministry announced today.

The raids began at dawn and when they were over, the ministry said, hits had been scored on the Germans at Ostend, Belgium; Calais and Boulogne, France, and in the Dutch harbors of Harlingen, Stavoren, Enkhuisen, Dordrecht, and Den Helder.

Airdrome Bombed

Other British bombers went on over Holland into western Germany and bombed the airdrome at Diepholz, thirty miles southwest of Bremen.

Diepholz already has felt the jar of British bombs in six previous attacks, according to a list of more than 200 'military targets" raided by the Royal Air Forces up to Sept. 30 in Germany and German-occupied territory.

The list was published by the ministry of information, amplifying the announcement of the British "master plan" aimed at "weak spots" in the German war effort.

Berlin—the Reich's heart—has been raided fifteen times. The list revealed that the British struck there at gasoline installations, utilities, railways, airdromes and gun positions.

The port of Hamburg, raided thirty-six times, Hamm, forty-five times, and Bremen, thirty-one, were especial targets of the RAF.

In yesterday's fighting, the air ministry information service said, one British raider let fly two heavy bombs in the midst of a group of fifty barges at Calais.

Just as his mission was completed, the raider was attacked by twenty-two Messerschmitt fighters. In a quick running fight, the British bomber crew shot down one German plane in flames, the service said, and held off the others until their craft reached the haven of a cloud.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 7 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie topped a day of hammering against Jersey City's Mayor Frank Hague and other Democratic "bosses" by telling a roaring Republican rally tonight that President Roosevelt seeks to perpeuate his power "through petty Hitlers right here in our own land."

Speaking to a flag-waving, cheering crowd estimated at 22,000, the Republican presidential nominee linked New Jersey, New York and Illinois Democratic leadership together as "the pillars of the New Deal democracy" and cried:

Roosevelt Tours Upstate N. Y. and Visits Arsenals

President Greeted by Large Crowds at Albany and Other Places

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 7, (AP) — President Roosevelt made a seventy-five-mile tour of upstate New York today, saw steel being processed into mammoth guns and looked over the rolling hills where an American army defeated the British exactly 163 years ago in the decisive revolutionary war battle of Saratoga.

And, whether he wanted it or not, the trip took on some of the aspects of campaign swings of the past, with huge crowds turning out to cheer him on his way, and a car and bus smothered with Democratic campaign banners crowding into his motorcade at Troy.

Democrats were holding a political rally here tonight and agreed to call it off in time to stage a demonstration at Union station before the chief executive departed for Washington.

Uses Special Train

A special train took Mr. Roosevelt from his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., to Watervliet, where he drove through one of the army's biggest and oldest arsenals. The plant is expanding production of guns for the army and navy, and soon will be turning out fourteen instead of six completed weapons a day.

The big attraction was in a cannon shop, where a fifteen-ton jacket heated to 700 degrees was shrunk onto the barrel of a 16-inch gun, sixty feet long and weighing forty tons. Eventually the gun will form part of the main battery of a battleship.

Mysterious Smokescreen Baffles Dover Watchers

Bustle of Activity among German Ships May Mean Hitler Is Preparing for Invasion

By The Associated Press

DOVER, England, Oct. 8 (Tuesday) — A German plane laid down a mysterious white smokescreen along the French coast across from Dover early today and a bustle of activity was reported shortly afterward among small boats off the continental coast.

The English channel was glassy smooth after several days of stormy, invasion-forbidding weather.

Shore watchers on this side were mystified by the unusual German operations. It was agreed that smokescreen, unlike anything seen before along the German-held French coast, was intended to hide some major shore activity in the Boulogne vicinity.

Soon after the plane completed its mission, several trawlers and drifters put out from the French shore and moved cautiously westward along the coast. If the smokescreen was laid down to hide this operation, it was a failure for British shore batteries, on the alert for every sign of an invasion move, saw the entire proceedings through powerful field glasses.

This mysterious activity came as Adolf Hitler's night-riders stormed against London in one of their most persistent night attacks following a day of fierce "substratosphere" dogfights above the capital.

London Area Heavily Bombed in Resumption of German Attacks

Nazis Also Drop Explosives in Daring Daylight Raids

LONDON, Oct. 8—(Tuesday)—(AP)—Adolf Hitler's nightriders attempted to make up for lost time last night and early today by striking hard at a number of London districts following a day of fierce "substratosphere" dogfights above the capital.

Several high explosive bombs were dropped at Liverpool last night and casualties. Several bombers took part in the night attack.

Deprived of their timetable assaults night before last by storm-swept skies for the first time in thirty days, the raiders swept back with the stars to lunge repeatedly at the metropolis. In all, ten London districts and a number of provincial areas were sprayed with high explosive and incendiary bombs.

500 In Daylight Raids

The night attacks were a continuation of mass daylight forays in which the RAF broke up formation after formation of German early today, causing a number of planes four to six miles above the city. The number of raiders was declared authoritatively to have numbered nearly 500.

A "Molotoff breadbasket" was dropped during the night near a large west end store adjoining others wrecked by heavy calibre bombs a fortnight ago. A high explosive bomb also damaged a large and famous west end structure now used as an office building and an incendiary fell near a bank in that vicinity but was extinguished.

Other Nazi formations dropped bombs in a thickly populated area of a southeast Scottish coast during the night, exchange telegraph reported. One explosive struck near a tenement and a number of people were cut by flying glass. The ceilings of nearby buildings collapsed from the impact.

From before dawn until after dusk last night London had experienced six air raid alarms.

Newly Married Men To Be Given Usual Exemption

No Discrimination against Them in Selecting Conscripts

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—Selective service officials emphasized today there would be no discrimination against newly-married men in choosing conscripts.

"The selective service law operates for five years, and we don't want to stop all marriages during that time," remarked Frederick Osborne, chairman of the president's advisory committee on the draft.

Questioned about recent reports of a rush of marriages in the face of the draft law, Colonel William Draper, another member of the president's committee, emphasized that the question of deferirng from service those men recently married would be decided on the same basis as the cases of all other married men.

The day brought these other developments bearing on the draft:

The House approved and sent to the Senate legislation giving the courts broad powers to stay eviction of dependents of soldiers and sailors from their homes because of overdue rents, and permitting the veterans administration to guarantee payment of premiums on draftees' insurance policies up to a face value of $5,000.

Senator Guffey (D-Penna) introduced legislation to exempt draftees from state or local income taxes.

The American Federation of Labor announced its members would be exempted from dues payments while serving with the military forces.

The treasury announced that sums an employer paid to an employe absent and in the military service would be deductible from gross income for federal income tax purposes.

Royal Air Force Sets Record in Night Drive On the German Capital

Hospitals, Apartment Houses, Storehouses and Rail Lines Hit, Berlin Declares; One British Bomber Brought Down from Height of from 9,000 to 12,000 Feet; Roofs and Windows Rattle

By PRESTON GROVER

BERLIN, Oct. 8 (Tuesday) (AP) — British warplanes in a raid of record-setting violence on the German capital killed and wounded several Berliners last night and early today and struck storehouses, rail lines, various apartments and two hospitals with explosive and fire-bombs.

One British plane was shot down by the terrific concentration of anti-aircraft fire.

A German communique issued shortly after the raid gave a terse outline of what happened in the four hours and forty-two minutes of bombing and artillery fire which topped all previous raids on the German capital.

The communique said:

"In the past night, British planes attacked the Reich's capital and dropped explosive and incendiary bombs at various places.

"Among other things hit were two hospitals, various apartment houses as well as storehouses and rail lines.

"The fires started were soon brought under control.

"Several dead and wounded are to be deplored.

"One airplane was shot down by anti-aircraft artillery."

Spectacular Destruction

This spectacular destruction of a British bomber came fairly early in the raid when the plane was at a height semi-officially estimated at 9,000 to 12,000 feet.

Caught in the converging cone of at least sixteen searchlights, the plane was held relentlessly in a quarter-mile patch of light into which the guns from the ground poured volley after volley of the heaviest caliber of explosive shells and shrapnel.

A companion plane, apparently seeking to divert some of the lights and the gunfire, sped into the glare, but to no avail, and ducked out into the darkness again.

The raid came as DNB, official German news agency, announced that twenty-two British and seven German planes had been destroyed in yesterday's fighting.

Few Quiet Moments

During the entire alarm there was scarcely a quiet moment as the bombers droned back and forth across the city, evidently trying to make up for the past three calm nights, while the cannonading from the ground maintained a hot pace.

Twice searchlights caught British bombers in focus and one appeared to have been shot down. The other wriggled out of the concentration glare and evidently escaped.

The raid lacked several minutes of being the longest Berlin has experienced, but it was one of the most intense, as measured by the din of artillery fire directed at the raiders.

Several Planes Over City

Planes often were at several points over the city simultaneously while circling fingers of light sought to close around them and projectiles exploded with pink, orange and white brilliance in fancy clusters.

Several times four or more flashes in the air at one time, apparently from the planes, drew concentrated fire from small fast-firing guns on the ground.

At least two objects fell within easy hearing distance of the Associated Press offices, but whether they were bombs or unexploded anti-aircraft shells could not be determined.

Lights Catch Plane

The lights caught their first plane about an hour after the raiders drew the first fire ove rthe city.

Before the bomber could dive into the darkness, sixteen lights were concentrated on it in a brilliant field.

The British plane twisted and turned directly over the city with exploding anti-aircraft shells bracketing it on all sides and above and below.

It tried slowing down, then suddenly speeding up to spoil the gunners' aim, but so many were trained on it that it must have been punctured many times.

The intensity of the artillery fire

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Oct. 7 (AP)—Gov. Culbert L. Olsen has signed into law a bill barring the Communist party from the California ballot. He asserted the party's "scurrilous methods and abusive manner" were partly responsible for the action he took.

He signed the measure after a state-wide radio broadcast in which he explained his action.

Defeat of New Deal Is Needed To Bring Prosperity, Nice Asserts

EASTON, Md., Oct. 7. (AP)—Former Gov. Harry W. Nice, Republican candidate for the U. S. Senate, carried his campaign into the Eastern Shore today and asserted in an address at a political rally tonight that "the defeat of the New Deal will bring back prosperity."

"You can't spend and spend without receiving and expect to have a balance," he told his audience of Talbot countians.

Before Nice spoke the crowd heard several songs by John Charles Thomas, Metropolitan Opera Company baritone who has an estate in Talbot county.

Nice said he believed "in helping England all we can but not one drop of blood of American youth should be spilled on foreign soil."

"It would be a tragedy to send Wendell Willkie to the White House and hamstring him with a Democratic Congress," Nice said. "I know from experience. While Governor I was blamed for the bad deeds of a Democratic legislature. And they took the credit for the good deeds."

He reviewed his administration as governor and said that during his term 700 miles of roads were built and 1100 miles of county roads were repaired so they could be used.

In a tour of sixteen counties, he said, he found a majority sentiment for the election of the entire Republican ticket.

Senate Orders Probe of Extent Of Foreign Anti-Defense Moves

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—The Senate ordered its Interstate Commerce Committee today to make a "thorough and complete" investigation of the extent to which foreign interests may influence American defense industry.

The chamber approved the inquiry despite a protest by Senator Austin (R-Vt.)

"I do not want to see Congress furnish the department of justice with material to club industrial enterprises over the head at a time when we want harmony in this country and want complete cooperation in building up the national defense," Austin said.

Senator Wheeler (D-Mont) chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee and sponsor of the investigation resolution, told Austin he was "entirely mistaken" if he thought "this resolution is to be used to club industry."

Not Political Measure

"There is no politics in it," Majority Leader Barkley (D-Ky) assured Austin, adding that certain contracts entered into by business firms before the way "may very seriously handicap our own industries in the matter of national defense."

The resolution declared among other things that "information has come to hand that some large concerns important to national defense have deferred national interests to

Van Cosel Says He Worked Seven Years Seeking To Revive Woman

KEY WEST, Fla., Oct. 7. (AP)—An aged, unemployed X-ray technician related to police today that he was driven by hopeless love to keep the corpse of a young matron in his bedroom for seven years while trying to restore her to life.

The man, Karl Tanzler van Cosel, 70, was charged with removing a body from its grave without permission.

He was arrested yesterday at his home—part of a dirty, ramshackle warehouse—where the life-like body of the young woman, reconstructed and preserved in wax, lay in bed.

Newly Married Men To Be Given Usual Exemption

No Discrimination against Them in Selecting Conscripts

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—Selective service officials emphasized today there would be no discrimination against newly-married men in choosing conscripts.

"The selective service law operates for five years, and we don't want to stop all marriages during that time," remarked Frederick Osborne, chairman of the president's advisory committee on the draft.

Questioned about recent reports of a rush of marriages in the face of the draft law, Colonel William Draper, another member of the president's committee, emphasized that the question of deferring from service those men recently married would be decided on the same basis as the cases of all other married men.

The day brought these other developments bearing on the draft:

The House approved and sent to the Senate legislation giving the courts broad powers to stay eviction of dependents of soldiers and sailors from their homes because of overdue rents, and permitting the veterans administration to guarantee payment of premiums on draftees' insurance policies up to a face value of $5,000.

Senator Guffey (D-Penna) introduced legislation to exempt draftees from state or local income taxes.

The American Federation of Labor announced its members would be exempted from dues payments while serving with the military forces.

The treasury announced that sums an employer paid to an employe absent and in the military service would be deductible from gross income for federal income tax purposes.

House Republicans Solid for Willkie

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—A conference of House Republicans adopted a resolution today pledging "steadfast allegiance and continuing loyalty" to Wendell Willkie.

The resolution, which Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, House Republican leader, said was adopted unanimously, also predicted victory for the party ticket.

Martin said adoption of the resolution followed what he described as "encouraging" reports from members on the progress of the Republican campaign.

Royal Air Force Sets Record in Night Drive On the German Capital

Hospitals, Apartment Houses, Storehouses and Rail Lines Hit, Berlin Declares; One British Bomber Brought Down from Height of from 9,000 to 12,000 Feet; Roofs and Windows Rattle

By PRESTON GROVER

BERLIN, Oct. 8 (Tuesday) (AP) — British warplanes in a raid of record-setting violence on the German capital killed and wounded several Berliners last night and early today and struck storehouses, rail lines, various apartments and two hospitals with explosive and fire-bombs.

One British plane was shot down by the terrific concentration of anti-aircraft fire.

A German communique issued shortly after the raid gave a terse outline of what happened in the four hours and forty-two minutes of bombing and artillery fire which topped all previous raids on the German capital.

The communique said:

"In the past night, British planes attacked the Reich's capital and dropped explosive and incendiary bombs at various places.

"Among other things hit were two hospitals, various apartment houses as well as storehouses and rail lines.

"The fires started were soon brought under control.

"Several dead and wounded are to be deplored.

Spectacular Destruction

This spectacular destruction of a British bomber came fairly early in the raid when the plane was at a height semi-officially estimated at 9,000 to 12,000 feet.

Caught in the converging cone of at least sixteen searchlights, the plane was held relentlessly in a quarter-mile patch of light into which the guns from the ground poured volley after volley of the heaviest caliber of explosive shells and shrapnel.

A companion plane, apparently seeking to divert some of the lights and the gunfire, sped into the glare, but to no avail, and ducked out into the darkness again.

The raid came as DNB, official German news agency, announced that twenty-two British and seven German planes had been destroyed in yesterday's fighting.

Few Quiet Moments

During the entire alarm there was scarcely a quiet moment as the bombers droned back and forth across the city, evidently trying to make up for the past three calm nights, while the cannonading from the ground maintained a hot pace.

Twice searchlights caught British bombers in focus and one appeared to have been shot down. The other wriggled out of the concentration glare and evidently escaped.

The raid lacked several minutes of being the longest Berlin has experienced, but it was one of the most intense, as measured by the din of artillery fire directed at the raiders.

Several Planes Over City

Planes often were at several points over the city simultaneously while circling fingers of light sought to close around them and projectiles exploded with pink, orange and white brilliance in fancy clusters.

Several times four or more flashes in the air at one time, apparently from the planes, drew concentrated fire from small fast-firing guns on the ground.

At least two objects fell within easy hearing distance of the Associated Press offices, but whether they were bombs or unexploded anti-aircraft shells could not be determined.

Lights Catch Plane

The lights caught their first plane about an hour after the raiders drew the first fire ove rthe city.

Before the bomber could dive into the darkness, sixteen lights were concentrated on it in a brilliant field.

The British plane twisted and turned directly over the city with exploding anti-aircraft shells bracketing it on all sides and above and below.

It tried slowing down, then suddenly speeding up to spoil the gunners' aim, but so many were trained on it that it must have been punctured many times.

California Bars Communist Party

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Oct. 7 (AP) —Gov. Culbert L. Olsen has signed into law a bill barring the Communist party from the California ballot. He asserted the party's "scurrilous methods and abusive manner" were partly responsible for the action he took.

He signed the measure after a state-wide radio broadcast in which he explained his action.

Senate Orders Probe of Extent Of Foreign Anti-Defense Moves

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—The Senate ordered its Interstate Commerce Committee today to make a "thorough and complete" investigation of the extent to which foreign interests may influence American defense industry.

The chamber approved the inquiry despite a protest by Senator Austin (R-Vt.)

"I do not want to see Congress furnish the department of justice with material to club industrial enterprises over the head at a time when we want harmony in this country and want complete cooperation in building up the national defense," Austin said.

Senator Wheeler (D-Mont) chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee and sponsor of the investigation resolution, told Austin he was "entirely mistaken" if he thought "this resolution is to be used to club industry."

Not Political Measure

"There is no politics in it," Majority Leader Barkley (D-Ky) assured Austin, adding that certain contracts entered into by business firms before the way "may very seriously handicap our own industries in the matter of national defense."

The resolution declared among other things that "information has come to hand that some large concerns important to national defense have deferred national interests to

Defeat of New Deal Is Needed To Bring Prosperity, Nice Asserts

EASTON, Md., Oct. 7. (AP)—Former Gov. Harry W. Nice, Republican candidate for the U. S. Senate, carried his campaign into the Eastern Shore today and asserted in an address at a political rally tonight that "the defeat of the New Deal will bring back prosperity."

"You can't spend and spend without receiving and expect to have a balance," he told his audience of Talbot countians.

Before Nice spoke the crowd heard several songs by John Charles Thomas, Metropolitan Opera Company baritone who has an estate in Talbot county.

Nice said he believed "in helping England all we can but not one drop of blood of American youth should be spilled on foreign soil."

"It would be a tragedy to send Wendell Willkie to the White House and hamstring him with a Democratic Congress," Nice said. "I know from experience. While Governor I was blamed for the bad deeds of a Democratic legislature. And they took the credit for the good deeds."

He reviewed his administration as governor and said that during his term 700 miles of roads were built and 1100 miles of county roads were repaired so they could be used.

In a tour of sixteen counties, he said, he found a majority sentiment for the election of the entire Republican ticket.

Mussolini Views Fascist Troops In Verona Area

Il Duce Expected To Reveal Next Move at an Early Date

By The Associated Press

ROME, Oct. 7—Fascist legions, readied for war, displayed their prowess before Premier Mussolini today in northeastern Italy while Rome diplomatic quarters speculated on the possibility that Il Duce might be about to make a speech on the Axis' next move.

Mussolini was in the Verona area continuing his troop inspections along the Po. On Thursday he will review more units at Padua, in the same area, and informed circles expressed belief he might say something then about his Brenner pass confab with Hitler.

Mussolini's plane landed at San Nicolo, the Lido, near Venice, early this morning and he hurried away to review motorized divisions at Monselice.

Sink British Submarine

The Italian high command reported another British submarine had been sunk by a flotilla of motor speedboats, the same group which was reported yesterday to have sunk a British underseas craft.

The high command declared a civilian was killed and six others injured when a British submarine shelled the city of Savona, in north western Italy near Genoa.

Italian warplanes attacked a British convoy in the Red Sea, the communique said.

Press spokesmen predicted the Brenner conversation soon would be transformed into action and paid increasing attention to the United States.

Predict "Something Big"

In Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia, the commentator Mario Appellius foresaw "something big" forthcoming from the Hitler-Mussolini parley. Since America is "not military ready" there is little likelihood she will mix in the European war, he said.

Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of foreign minister Count Galeazzo Ciano's Il Telegrafo, said the Axis may have "other diplomatic steps" on the fire to balk any attempt the United States might make to intervene.

London Area

tion in an effort to escape the sweeping searchlights and inferno of shell bursts sent up by ground batteries in full-throated unison. But they kept coming at ten-minute intervals.

British warplanes were on patrol in the darkness outside the great ring of lights.

As the night wore on, additional reports came in of raiders over northwest England, the highly industrialized midlands, the northeast and west coasts.

Some German craft hovered over a northeast coastal area two hours. Dropping flares and braving intense anti-aircraft fire, they dropped bombs some distance inland.

Around midnight there was a lull lasting some time.

Bursting shells and flaming onions flecked the night sky and rooftop observers repeatedly had to duck for shelter as chunks of jagged metal clanked to earth.

A series of heavy detonations sounded in the central area, and many incendiaries rained down, hitting one bus, starting fires in a big block of apartments and causing the sky to flame red briefly.

Coming in a steady stream, the Germans filtered across the London sky attempting to evade the creeping barrage.

"Invisible Battle"

The air ministry, describing the day's actions, in which twenty-eight German bombers the fighters were said to have been sent crashing, said one invisible battle was fought between Hurricanes and more than fifty Messerschmitts zigzagging nearly six miles above London.

Fourteen British craft were reported missing.

The British airmen speaked into big formations totaling perhaps 450 planes which five times attempted to reach London during the day and then tackled another mass of raiders which crossed the Dorset coast near the big naval base of Weymouth.

The German squadrons were said by the air ministry to have been forced upward by slear weather and to have "concentrated on height and speed." Many of them were fighter planes loaded with bombs.

Germans Change System

Messerschmitt fighter protected Messerschmitt fighter, instead of the usual order of Messerschmitt protecting bomber, and the air ministry said the RAF kept meeting them at 20,000, 25,000 and 30,000 feet.

One Hurricane squadron met fifteen of them carrying bombs, the air ministry said, with forty or fifty more above and behind, and destroyed seven of them.

Three times day raiders were turned aside, but in other attempts the Germans penetrated the central district, dropped bombs in the southeastern outskirts, causing death, injury and destruction for a few of London's millions in two boroughs.

And then promptly at dusk, the German "night shift" took over after its first rest in a month on Sunday night.

The air ministry said damage was done to a "southwest" town—probably Weymouth.)

Seven Raiders Crash

The battle at Weymouth was a great, sprawling, sky-filled affair in which at least seven of the raiders were sent crashing at as many Dorset villages.

An eyewitness said the raiders were "scattered in all directions," in a series of high dogfights, and that the British ground fire and fighter attack was so fierce the Germans were "penned up" for more than half an hour, unable to go on into the interior or retreat across the sea.

Planes were reported to have fallen at Sydling, Cerne Abbas, Buckland Newton, Preston, Kingston, Russel, Burton Bradstock and Cofre Castle, all within about fifteen miles of Weymouth.

"The day was one of long chases often ending far out from land," the air ministry related.

"A running fight over London began about 1:30 p. m., when Hurricanes attacked fifty Messerschmitt 109s and four Heinkel 113 fighters at 30,000 feet.

"The Hurricans chased them from London far over the channel, sending two Messerschmitts crashing into the sea and a third was downed on land.

Chase 40 German Planes

"Spitfires at 27,000 feet chased forty Messerschmitts from the middle of Surrey nearly to France. A single Dornier 215 bomber attacked by three Spitfires put up the best fight of the day.

"A Spitfire pilot spoke approvingly of the German rear gunner's 'intense and accurate fire.' As the Spitfires circled and dived on him he kept fighting back. Not until the Dornier was over the channel did the rear gunner stop firing. Then the Dornier plunged down."

Bright weather facilitated mass maneuvers, after last night's storms which not only kept German but also British bombers at home.

Usual Daylight Raids

But the air ministry said daylight raids were carried out from morning until night yesterday on a string of German "invasion" hideaways along the Dutch, French and Belgian coasts.

The RAF ducked into Holland's Zuider Zee for stabs at barge and shipping concentrations at Harlingen, Stavoren, Enkhuizen and the former Dutch naval base of Den Helder, and again bombed the ports of Ostend, Calais and Boulogne, the air ministry said. An airdrome in western Germany, at Diepholz, and barges at Dordrecht in Holland also were attacked.

Plan Diplomatic Drive

A diplomatic counter-offensive may be launched also in the far east, informed sources said, indicating that Prime Minister Winston Churchill may soon announce the reopening of the Burma Road to war supplies from China now that Japan has joined Britain's foes in a new Axis.

Spokesmen said the Japanese by their actions had nullified "the whole point of the agreement" to close the road for three months in order to lessen tension between Britain and Japan.

The agreement expires Oct. 17.

Expect Many Raids

Meanwhile, the ministry of health announced plans to relieve some of the suffering for London's women and children in London which may have to undergo a whole winter of bombing.

The ministry said a large-scale removal from London of expectant mothers and mothers with children under five would be put into effect immediately, with the government providing the transportation and paying lodging allowances.

Another historic edifice, Lambeth palace, residence of the arch-bishops of Canterberry since 1262, was disclosed as having been added to the list of landmarks damaged by raids.

The archbishop said at a diocesan conference that he no longer is able to live there with his staff because a bomb hit the central and newer sections, knocking down a central wall and causing great devastation. The building stands opposite the houses of Parliament where a bomb recently broke nearly every window in the House of Lords and did some damage to the Henry VII's chapel in historic Westminster Abbey.

Says President

motor tour of the heavily-populated industrial areas of northern New Jersey. He started in the Democratic powerhouse of Hudson county and invaded Journal Square, the heart of the Jersey City stronghold of Mayor Frank Hague, state Democratic leader and vice chairman of the National Committee.

His address tonight was punctuated by audience shouts of "give it to him, Wendell" and boos at the mention of Hague whom Willkie described as the "friend and political confidante of the man who is trying to violate the most cherished principle of American democracy."

Five Minute Ovation

The crowd roared a five-minute ovation for Willkie when he arrived at the stadium.

The nominee came to the front of the platform, over which hung a large illuminated Willkie portrait. He waved first one hand and then the other.

Mrs. Willkie and state Republican leaders sat on the stage behind the presidential candidate.

Near the close of his prepared address tonight, Willkie said "the head of the New Deal party has had some things to say, recently, about the attitude of Hitler and Mussolini toward our elections in America."

America Close to Wars

"Not only has he pushed America close to the wars in Europe and Asia," Willkie added. "He now seeks to drag the wars of Europe and Asia into American politics.

"He tells us that he, and he alone, represents democracy.

"But I say—that he cannot represent the democracy that I stand for while he seeks to perpetuate his power through petty Hitlers right here in our own land."

Referring to Hague, a vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee as "vice chairman of the party of the New Deal," Willkie said:

"I know that there are many here—and I was one of them—who looked forward with great hope to the liberal movement that swept over this nation in 1932. It is a tragedy that the leader of this movement—the present third term candidate—should now have among his closest lieutenants a man whose machine had to burn the voting records of the people in order to hide crimes.

Scores Big Bosses

"Frank Hague isn't the only leader of this new liberalism. Across the river there is the boss of the Bronx. And out in Chicago there is the commissioner of sewers. These are the pillars of the New Deal democracy.

"We have eye-witness reports. We have photographs of New Dealers, who have been governing us for nearly eight years, seated in conference with these bosses at the Chicago convention to nominate their third term candidate.

"I ask this question: what deal has the New Deal made with these men? What are they going to deal out to the voters, if elected?

"The voice of the sewers isn't in it for love. Neither is the mayor of Jersey City. These are political men. They are rich men. Before they act they want to know what they are going to get.

"You and I know what kind of deals are made between machine politicians and office-holders. We know that those deals will not work out to the benefit of us, the people."

The Republican nominee said the "New Deal party" was so confident of the "power of these machines" to deliver the votes of New York, Illinois and New Jersey that "they don't even make an argument.

Issues Not Discussed

"They don't even discuss the issues in this campaign. Their candidate pretends not to know whether his speeches are political or not.

"Is anyone here so gullible as to think that the third term candidate is paying no attention to politics?

"Is anyone here so charitable as to think, in the light of the record, that those inspection trips, those dramatic gestures, those suddenly created emergencies, are all non-political?"

In Jersey City, Willkie charged that the democratic administration "seeks to perpetuate itself in power with a combination of the greatest bunch of corruptionists and racketeers that ever existed in America." He called Hague a "punky Hitler" who was "helping to pilot" the ship of state.

"Why," exclaimed Willkie, "there won't be anything left of the ship of state when he gets through."

Addresses Large Crowd

The tired but smiling nominee addressed a crowd which filled from curb to curb spacious Journal square, from which police "deported" Norman Thomas when he tried to speak two years ago. Willkie had elaborate police protection — some 600 officers in Jersey City alone, with detectives on roofs along the route of his motorcade — but he hit at Hague for ordering it.

"Men like this puny Hitler here," said Willkie, "have attempted to control our political life and say who shall not be received courteously in the great state of New Jersey."

He identified Hague as "the principal promoter of the third-term draft, if such it be."

Speaking in Paterson later, Willkie said:

"I want to eliminate that fellow up in Jersey City who says 'I am the law.' xxx."

Accompanied by state Republican candidates and party leaders in a mile-long motor parade, Willkie entered the state from New York city at Hoboken, spoke in Jersey City, Hackensack, Paterson and Kearny, then came to Newark for his major address of the day.

Hoboken, part of Hague's Hudson county stronghold, gave him a lukewarm reception, but he found the Republicans gathered in Journal Square, William E. Sewell, Hudson county superintendent of elections and Republican battering ram in an assault on Democratic pluralities there, estimated the crowd at 15,000.

O'Conor Sees State And Nation United To Speed Defense

TAKOMA PARK, Md., Oct. 7 (AP)—Governor O'Conor said tonight that the defense emergency facing the nation "has brought about a much closer relationship between state and federal governments, and prospects undoubtedly are that it will become greater rather than diminish."

Speaking at the Takoma Park chamber of commerce annual fall banquet, the governor said the co-operation of all states with the federal government was necessary for the "number one" function of government today—"to survive by becoming so strong that no nation or combinations may overcome us."

Because of preparation now under way, he said, Maryland "will be ready to throw every bit of her resources into the struggle without any of the heart-breaking delays that marked defense efforts during the first year of the World war" should a real emergency develop.

Negroes Deny Signing Communist Petition

BALTIMORE, Oct. 7 (AP)—Ten negroes denied in Criminal Court today that they signed the Communist party's nominating petition which bore their alleged signatures when filed with the secretary of state.

Each of the ten said that not until today had they seen Mrs. Dorothy Rose Blumberg, who is being tried on a fourteen-count indictment accusing her of perjury in connection with obtaining signatures on the party's petition to have Communist candidates on the ballot.

She is accused of making a false oath in an affidavit in which she alleged that she saw all the persons whose names appear on the petition sign the paper and that she personally knew the signers were registered voters of the state.

also published regulations governing the classification of men according to their liability for military service.

"The rules are unexpectedly short and far broader than people have been led to expect," said Osborne, emphasizing that wide latitude would be left to local draft boards in deciding cases of deferment from service for occupational and dependency reasons.

Sheriff's Son Is Held for Theft of Car from Window

George W. Shipley in Trouble for the Second Time

WESTMINSTER, Md., Oct. 7 (AP)—George Wilbur Shipley, 24, son of Sheriff Walter L. Shipley of Carrollcounty, was arrested today on a warrant charging him with stealing an automobile from a main street show window four days ago.

On April 6, 1939, Shipley pleaded guilty to a charge of burglarly of an automobile and accessories. He was sentenced to three years in the House of Correction, but paroled by Judge William H. Lawrence at Towson without serving any of the term.

A warrant for his arrest today was obtained after L. H. Santee of the state police, and Chief Deputy Sheriff Wesley Mathias investigated the theft of a new 1941 sedan from the show window of the Walter H. Davis Company last Thursday night. The car was found abandoned the next day at Aberdeen.

Officers Silent

The officers made no comment on the investigation, nor on their questioning of the sheriff's son. He was placed in the Carroll county jail, after Santee placed him under arrest.

State's Attorney Donald Sponseller, who worked with the two officers on the investigation, likewise declined comment on the arrest. He said a preliminary hearing would be arranged later unless Shipley waived it, in which case he could post bond and await action of the grand jury.

Find Abandoned Car

Officers called after the theft was discovered Friday morning said glass in a rear door of the Davis garage had been broken, giving the thief access to the show room. State police at Bel Air found the abandoned car the next afternoon.

Shipley was accused in the charge of "breaking and entering the premises of the Walter H. Davis Company, and stealing therefrom an automobile."

In the charge on which he was sentenced in 1939, Shipley was accused of stealing a car and accessories from a Reistertown automobile agency.

Delaware Senator And Wife Killed In an Explosion

OCEAN CITY, Md., Oct. 7 (AP)—A Delaware state senator and his wife perished today in an explosion which rocked their thirty-nine-foot cruiser two and one-half miles out in the Atlantic. Three others were rescued after the captain, his clothing aflame, plunged into the sea, then climbed back aboard to distribute life preservers.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Steel of Ocean View, Del., were the victims, and Capt. T. E. Phillips of the coast guard said both apparently died from heart attacks. Steel was knocked into the sea by the blast, and his wife died in the water, kept afloat by a life preserver.

Philips said Capt. William Murray told him a spark apparently ignited gasoline when he attempted to start the engine. His clothing ablaze, he leaped into the sea, then returned and got life preservers to Mrs. Steel, John A. Tubbs of Selbyville, Del., and Mrs. Elliott Evans, of Ocean View. All jumped into the water and were picked up by coast guardsmen and a passing boatman. The sirvivors were treated for burns and their thirty-minute exposure in the water.

Frederick County Fair Opens Today

FREDERICK, Md., Oct. 7 (AP)—Boasting new buildings necessitated by an increase of exhibits, sponsors of the Frederick county fair were ready tonight for the opening tomorrow of their eighth annual show.

Two new buildings for cattle, and an addition to the barn for horses were open and filled tonight with live stock which is expected to be a main center of interest in this rich agricultural section.

Officials said entries in many divisions were crowded to capacity, and most exhibits were larger than last year. The two new cattle barns will accommodate 132 animals, and the horse barn, with the addition, has a capacity of 100 entries.

The four-day fair will maintain a continuous program of entertainment, ranging from the judging of exhibits to fireworks displays. The latter will climax grandstand shows on Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Harness and running races will be held the first three afternoons. The final afternoon feature Friday will be a "thrill" program in front of the grandstand.

Two Army Fliers Killed in Crash

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 7 (AP)—Two army fliers died today as their two-seated attack ship crashed against the side of a mountain.

The victims were believed to be Lieut. James E. Mather of Salt Lake City and Prite Homer C. Lloyd of Rosebud, Mont. A watch bearing Mather's name was taken from one of the bodies, both of which were burned.

Goodnatured banter marked the meeting of Senator Charles McNary (R-Ore), GOP nominee for the vice presidency, and former Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Here they are in Minneapolis when they left the train briefly to stretch their legs.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Britishers, already buoyed by official optimism over the progress of the battle of Britain, can find fresh encouragement in news of Balkan developments.

Substantial forces of German troops—and possibly Italian also—have been dispatched into Rumania, for "precautionary" purposes, according to Berlin. Protection of Rumanian oil resources from possible sabotage by British agents is the hinted motive. However, the nature of the force, reported in some quarters to include all arms, suggests that uncertainty over Russia's future role might be the real explanation.

Certainly Russia alone, not Britain, could threaten Rumania's shrivled frontier. Germany commitments to protect those frontiers, fixed by Berlin fiat, were announced as the reason for the march into that troubled country.

Need Oil for Winter

Coming close after the Hitler-Mussolini meeting, the Rumanian oil for the German and Italian war machines was a prime matter discussed in Brenner pass. Rising British confidence of turning the tables on Germany rests in part on the expectation that the Nazis eventually will run short of oil.

Any fresh disorder in Rumania this winter could be a serious matter for the Axis mates, whether the disorder arose from internal or external pressure. With the Danube frozen and Rumania's rail lines inadequate, the task of maintaining a sufficient oil flow will be difficult in any case. It was troublesome for Germany last winter before the terrific drain of active warfare in the west began to sap reserves.

Much Gas Consumed

London officials recently estimated that the air attack on England had already consumed all aviation gasoline stocks captured by the Germans in continental victories. They report that Nazi air craft shot down in England show evidence of a shortage of high test fuel. Some planes were said to be equipped to take off and land on high test but to fly on lower grade gasoline.

If that is true, it helps explain the Balkan developments, and underscores the German march into Rumania to protect that vital war-making resource from either sabotage or possible Russian anti-Axis maneuvering.

Moscow's reaction to the new German-Italian-Japanese pact has not been all that its authors could desire. For whatever reason, the rumored trip to Moscow by Nazi Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop to enlarge the scope of that tri-partite gesture has not yet come off. It may have been deferred, or abandoned.

Friction Suggested

The sending of a completely equipped Nazi army to Rumania to guard that country from an invasion that could come only from Russia suggests increasing friction, not friendship, between Moscow and the Axis.

Whatever it bodes, the German move in Rumania can hardly fail to encourage bomb-battered Britain both because it denotes obvious Axis concern over oil stocks, and because of the imponderable Russian angle.

monetary considerations by giving preference to foreign munitions orders."

It said also that "authentic reports indicate that German and other foreign corporations enjoy a measure of control over some of our most important defense industries."

Meantime, the House completed Congressional action on a bill which Rep. Voorhis (D-Calif), its author, said would require the Communist party, the German-American Bund and the Nazi party to file detailed reports with the justice department.

The following types of organization would have to register with the department:

These Must Register

(1) Organizations engaged in political activity and under the control of a foreign government.

(2) Organizations engaged both in political activity and military activity.

(3) Organizations engaged in military activity and under the control of a foreign government.

(4) Organizations whose aim is to overthrow the United States government by force, violence or military measures.

The roofs rattled with falling shell fragments.

It is difficult for even the most experienced observers to determine whether certain rocking explosions are bombs or merely crashing volleys from whole batteries of anti-aircraft guns.

Detours Through Troy

Setting out for Saratoga battlefield, with Mrs. Roosevelt and Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York riding with him, the president detoured through Troy. Yelling people in unnumbered thousands lined the streets, children on bicycles wheeled along beside the caravan of cars, factory whistles and fire engine sirens wailed lustily.

On a less elaborate scale, it was much the same story as the president rolled in turn through Cohoes, Waterford, Mechanicville, Stillwater, Schuylesville, Saratoga Springs and other small towns on the way back to Albany.

American-Russian Diplomatic Talks Again in Progress

Resumption after Forming of Triple Alliance Is Significant

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7. (AP)—American-Russian diplomatic talks were resumed here unexpectedly tonight after a lapse of two months and resulted in new speculation that Russia may not like the Japanese-German-Italian alliance.

Constantine Oumansky, Soviet ambassador, called at the state department in the early evening and conferred with Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state. The only comment available at the department was that it was a resumption of the talks begun last summer.

Early in August Oumansky conferred several times with Welles on steps necessary by both sides to improve relations. When the talks were suspended, it was indicated that substantial difficulties had arisen.

Conference Significant

Their resumption at this time was considered significant in some quarters because of the new triple alliance, although that pact contained an assurance that it did not disturb existing relations between Germany and Russia.

An indication that Russia and Great Britain might also be seeking friendlier relations was a conference last week in London between Soviet Ambassador Ivan Miaksy and R. A. Butler, British foreign undersecretary.

Admiral James O. Richardson, commander of the United States fleet, flew into Washington from the west coast today and plunged immediately into conferences with Secretary Knox and other high navy officials regarding the troubled situation in the Pacific.

Sitting in on the conference was Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, retired, former commander of the Asiatic fleet, who has been advocating increased economic pressure on Japan, more aid to China, larger American forces in the Philippines and other measures to reverse "Japan's foreign policy."

Singapore Discussed

Unofficially, there was some conjecturing as to whether the navy might be planning the use it would make of the strongly fortified British naval base at Singapore in the event that John Bull made it available to Uncle Sam.

Talk of the United States getting the use of facilities at Singapore persisted as the British government prepared to announce in Parliament, within the next few days, whether it would defy Japan by reopening the Burma Road, vital supply line for China.

Britain closed this road some two months ago but, since Tokyo announced an alliance with Berlin and Rome, it has been predicted generally that the route would be reopened.

Secretary Hull conferred again today with Lord Lothian, the British ambassador; and later Richard G. Casey, Australian minister, saw Undersecretary Welles.

store her to life," Van Cosel told Deputy Sheriff Ray Elwood and newsmen. "I still hope if I live long enough to bring her back."

Took Body to Hospital

When he first removed the body of the woman from its crypt more than seven years ago, Van Cosel said he slipped it secretly into the Key West Marine hospital, where he had been employed as an X-ray technician, and kept it there a week while he used available chemicals to restore decomposed portions.

Then, hiding the corpse in an old airplane he had purchased, he had it carted to his makeshift home on the outskirts of this island community.

Police reopened the crypt in which the young woman had been buried and found it empty. A medical examiner said at least part of a human body remained in the now largely wax image that remained.

University Graduate

Van Cosel, a native German with degrees from Leipzig University, told his story in a calm, well-educated voice, his English somewhat broken. Although ill-kempt when arrested, he made an impressive figure after a change of clothing. Tall and erect, he sported a well-trimmed Van Dyke beard.

The prisoner said he hoped to keep the outer tissue of the body sculptured to its original likeness with beeswax and reactivate the inner cells through X-ray treatments.

Mussolini Views Fascist Troops In Verona Area

Il Duce Expected To Reveal Next Move at an Early Date

By The Associated Press

ROME, Oct. 7—Fascist legions, readied for war, displayed their prowess before Premier Mussolini today in northeastern Italy while Rome diplomatic quarters speculated on the possibility that Il Duce might be about to make a speech on the Axis' next move.

Mussolini was in the Verona area continuing his troop inspections along the Po. On Thursday he will review more units at Padua, in the same area, and informed circles expressed belief he might say something then about his Brenner pass confab with Hitler.

Mussolini's plane landed at San Nicolo, the Lido, near Venice, early this morning and he hurried away to review motorized divisions at Monselice.

Sink British Submarine

The Italian high command reported another British submarine had been sunk by a flotilla of motor speedboats, the same group which was reported yesterday to have sunk a British underseas craft.

The high command declared a civilian was killed and six others injured when a British submarine shelled the city of Savona, in north western Italy near Genoa.

Italian warplanes attacked a British convoy in the Red Sea, the communique said.

Press spokesmen predicted the Brenner conversation soon would be transformed into action and paid increasing attention to the United States.

Predict "Something Big"

In Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia, the commentator Mario Appellius foresaw "something big" forthcoming from the Hitler-Mussolini parley. Since America is "not military ready" there is little likelihood she will mix in the European war, he said.

Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of foreign minister Count Galeazzo Ciano's Il Telegrafo, said the Axis may have "other diplomatic steps" on the fire to balk any attempt the United States might make to intervene.

London Area

tion in an effort to escape the sweeping searchlights and inferno of shell bursts sent up by ground batteries in full-throated unison. But they kept coming at ten-minute intervals.

British warplanes were on patrol in the darkness outside the great ring of lights.

As the night wore on, additional reports came in of raiders over northwest England, the highly industrialized midlands, the northeast and west coasts.

Some German craft hovered over a northeast coastal area two hours. Dropping flares and braving intense anti-aircraft fire, they dropped bombs some distance inland.

Around midnight there was a lull lasting some time.

Bursting shells and flaming onions flecked the night sky and rooftop observers repeatedly had to duck for shelter as chunks of jagged metal clanked to earth.

A series of heavy detonations sounded in the central area, and many incendiaries rained down, hitting one bus, starting fires in a big block of apartments and causing the sky to flame red briefly.

Coming in a steady stream, the Germans filtered across the London sky attempting to evade the creeping barrage.

"Invisible Battle"

The air ministry, describing the day's actions, in which twenty-eight German bombers the fighters were said to have been sent crashing, said one invisible battle was fought between Hurricanes and more than fifty Messerschmitts zigzagging nearly six miles above London.

Fourteen British craft were reported missing.

The British airmen speared into big formations totaling perhaps 450 planes which five times attempted to reach London during the day and then tackled another mass of raiders which crossed the Dorset coast near the big naval base of Weymouth.

The German squadrons were said by the air ministry to have been forced upward by clear weather and to have "concentrated on height and speed." Many of them were fighter planes loaded with bombs.

Germans Change System

Messerschmitt fighter protected Messerschmitt fighter, instead of the usual order of Messerschmitt protecting bomber, and the air ministry said the RAF kept meeting them at 20,000, 25,000 and 30,000 feet.

One Hurricane squadron met fifteen of them carrying bombs, the air ministry said, with forty or fifty more above and behind, and destroyed seven of them.

Three times day raiders were turned aside, but in other attempts the Germans penetrated the central district, dropped bombs in the southeastern outskirts, causing death, injury and destruction for a few of London's millions in two boroughs.

And then promptly at dusk, the German "night shift" took over after its first rest in a month on Sunday night.

The air ministry said damage was done to a "southwest" town—probably Weymouth.)

Seven Raiders Crash

The battle at Weymouth was a great, sprawling, sky-filled affair in which at least seven of the raiders were sent crashing at as many Dorset villages.

An eyewitness said the raiders were "scattered in all directions," in a series of high dogfights, and that the British ground fire and fighter attack was so fierce the Germans were "penned up" for more than half an hour, unable to go on into the interior or retreat across the sea.

Planes were reported to have fallen at Sydling, Cerne Abbas, Buckland Newton, Preston, Kingston, Russel, Burton Bradstock and Cofre Castle, all within about fifteen miles of Weymouth.

"The day was one of long chases, often ending far out from land," the air ministry related.

"A running fight over London began about 1:30 p. m., when Hurricanes attacked fifty Messerschmitt 109s and four Heinkel 113 fighters at 30,000 feet.

"The Hurricans chased them from London far over the channel, sending two Messerschmitts crashing into the sea and a third was downed on land.

Chase 40 German Planes

"Spitfires at 27,000 feet chased forty Messerschmitts from the middle of Surrey nearly to France. A single Dornier 215 bomber attacked by three Spitfires put up the best fight of the day.

"A Spitfire pilot spoke approvingly of the German rear gunner's intense and accurate fire. As the Spitfires circled and dived on him he kept fighting back. Not until the Dornier was over the channel did the rear gunner stop firing. Then the Dornier plunged down."

Bright weather facilitated mass maneuvers after last night's storms which not only kept German but also British bombers at home.

Usual Daylight Raids

But the air ministry said daylight raids were carried out from morning until night yesterday on a string of German "invasion" hideaways along the Dutch, French and Belgian coasts.

The RAF ducked into Holland's Zuider Zee for stabs at barge and shipping concentrations at Harlingen, Stavoren, Enkhuizen and the former Dutch naval base of Den Helder, and again bombed the ports of Ostend, Calais and Boulogne, the air ministry said. An airdrome in western Germany, at Diepholz, and barges at Dordrecht in Holland also were attacked.

Plan Diplomatic Drive

A diplomatic counter-offensive may be launched also in the far east, informed sources said, indicating that Prime Minister Winston Churchill may soon announce the reopening of the Burma Road to war supplies from China now that Japan has joined Britain's foes in a new Axis.

Spokesmen said the Japanese by their actions had nullified "the whole point of the agreement" to close the road for three months in order to lessen tension between Britain and Japan.

The agreement expires Oct. 17.

Expect Many Raids

Meanwhile, the ministry of health announced plans to relieve some of the suffering for London's women and children in London which may have to undergo a whole winter of bombing.

The ministry said a large-scale removal from London of expectant mothers and mothers with children under five would be put into effect immediately, with the government providing the transportation and paying lodging allowances.

Another historic edifice, Lambeth palace, residence of the arch-bishops of Canterberry since 1262, was disclosed as having been added to the list of landmarks damaged by raids.

The archbishop said at a diocesan conference that he no longer is able to live there with his staff because a bomb hit the central and newer sections, knocking down a central wall and causing great devastation. The building stands opposite the houses of Parliament where a bomb recently broke nearly every window in the House of Lords and did some damage to the Henry VII's chapel in historic Westminster Abbey.

Says President

motor tour of the heavily-populated industrial areas of northern New Jersey. He started in the Democratic powerhouse of Hudson county and invaded Journal Square, the heart of the Jersey City stronghold of Mayor Frank Hague, state Democratic leader and vice chairman of the National Committee.

His address tonight was punctuated by audience shouts of "give it to him, Wendell" and boos at the mention of Hague whom Willkie described as the "friend and political confidante of the man who is trying to violate the most cherished principle of American democracy."

Five Minute Ovation

The crowd roared a five-minute ovation for Willkie when he arrived at the stadium.

The nominee came to the front of the platform, over which hung a large illuminated Willkie portrait. He waved first one hand and then the other.

Mrs. Willkie and state Republican leaders sat on the stage behind the presidential candidate.

Near the close of his prepared address tonight, Willkie said "the head of the New Deal party has had some things to say, recently, about the attitude of Hitler and Mussolini toward our elections in America."

America Close to Wars

"Not only has he pushed America close to the wars in Europe and Asia," Willkie added. "He now seeks to drag the wars of Europe and Asia into American politics.

"He tells us that he, and he alone, represents democracy.

"But I say—that he cannot represent the democracy that I stand for while he seeks to perpetuate his power through petty Hitlers right here in our own land."

Referring to Hague, a vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee as "vice chairman of the party of the New Deal," Willkie said:

"I know that there are many here—and I was one of them—who looked forward with great hope to the liberal movement that swept over this nation in 1932. It is a tragedy that the leader of this movement—the present third term candidate—should now have among his closest lieutenants a man whose machine had to build the voting records of the people in order to hide crimes.

Scores Big Bosses

"Frank Hague isn't the only leader of this new liberalism. Across the river there is the boss of the Bronx. And out in Chicago there is the commissioner of sewers. These are the pillars of the New Deal democracy.

"We have eye-witness reports. We have photographs of New Dealers, who have been governing us for nearly eight years, seated in conference with these bosses at the Chicago convention to nominate their third term candidate.

"I ask this question: what deal has the New Deal made with these men? What are they going to deal out to the voters, if elected?

"The voice of the sewers isn't in it for love. Neither is the mayor of Jersey City. These are political men. They are rich men. Before they act they want to know what they are going to get.

"You and I know what kind of deals are made between machine politicians and office-holders. We know that those deals will not work out to the benefit of us, the people."

The Republican nominee said the "New Deal party" was so confident of the "power of these machines" to deliver the votes of New York, Illinois and New Jersey that "they don't even make an argument.

Issues Not Discussed

"They don't even discuss the issues in this campaign. Their candidate pretends not to know whether his speeches are political or not.

"Is anyone here so gullible as to think that the third term candidate is paying no attention to politics?

"Is anyone here so charitable as to think, in the light of the record, that those inspection trips, those dramatic gestures, those suddenly created emergencies, are all non-political?"

In Jersey City, Willkie charged that the democratic administration "seeks to perpetuate itself in power with a combination of the greatest bunch of corruptionists and racketeers that ever existed in America." He called Hague a "punky Hitler" who was "helping to pilot" the ship of state.

"Why," exclaimed Willkie, "there won't be anything left of the ship of state when he gets through."

Addresses Large Crowd

The tired but smiling nominee addressed a crowd which filled from curb to curb spacious Journal square, from which police "deported" Norman Thomas when he tried to speak two years ago. Willkie had elaborate police protection — some 600 officers in Jersey City alone, with detectives on roofs along the route of his motorcade — but he hit at Hague for ordering it.

"Men like this puny Hitler here," said Willkie, "have attempted to control our political life and say who shall not be received courteously in the great state of New Jersey."

He identified Hague as "the principal promoter of the third-term draft, if such it be."

Speaking in Paterson later, Willkie said:

"I want to eliminate that fellow up in Jersey City who says, 'I am the law.' xxx."

Accompanied by state Republican candidates and party leaders in a mile-long motor parade, Willkie entered the state from New York city at Hoboken, spoke in Jersey City, Hackensack, Paterson and Kearny, then came to Newark for his major address of the day.

Hoboken, part of Hague's Hudson county stronghold, gave him a lukewarm reception, but he found the Republicans gathered in Journal Square, William E. Sewell, Hudson county superintendent of elections and Republican battering ram in an assault on Democratic pluralities there, estimated the crowd at 15,000.

O'Conor Sees State And Nation United To Speed Defense

TAKOMA PARK, Md., Oct. 7 (AP)—Governor O'Conor said tonight that the defense emergency facing the nation "has brought about a much closer relationship between state and federal governments, and prospects undoubtedly are that it will become greater rather than diminish."

Speaking at the Takoma Park chamber of commerce annual fall banquet, the governor said the co-operation of all states with the federal government was necessary for the "number one" function of government today—"to survive by becoming so strong that no nation or combinations may overcome us."

Because of preparation now under way, he said, Maryland "will be ready to throw every bit of her resources into the struggle without any of the heart-breaking delays that marked defense efforts during the first year of the World war" should a real emergency develop.

Negroes Deny Signing Communist Petition

BALTIMORE, Oct. 7 (AP)—Ten negroes denied in Criminal Court today that they signed the Communist party's nominating petition which bore their alleged signatures when filed with the secretary of state.

Each of the ten said that not until today had they seen Mrs. Dorothy Rose Blumberg, who is being tried on a fourteen-count indictment accusing her of perjury in connection with obtaining signatures on the party's petition to have Communist candidates on the ballot.

She is accused of making a false oath in an affidavit in which she alleged that she saw all the persons whose names appear on the petition sign the paper and that she personally knew the signers were registered voters of the state.

Sheriff's Son Is Held for Theft of Car from Window

George W. Shipley in Trouble for the Second Time

WESTMINSTER, Md., Oct. 7 (AP)—George Wilbur Shipley, 24, son of Sheriff Walter L. Shipley of Carrollcounty, was arrested today on a warrant charging him with stealing an automobile from a main street show window four days ago.

On April 6, 1939, Shipley pleaded guilty to a charge of burglarly of an automobile and accessories. He was sentenced to three years in the House of Correction, but paroled by Judge William H. Lawrence at Towson without serving any of the term.

A warrant for his arrest today was obtained after L. H. Santee of the state police, and Chief Deputy Sheriff Wesley Mathias investigated the theft of a new 1941 sedan from the show window of the Walter H. Davis Company last Thursday night. The car was found abandoned the next day at Aberdeen.

Officers Silent

The officers made no comment on the investigation, nor on their questioning of the sheriff's son. He was placed in the Carroll county jail, after Santee placed him under arrest.

State's Attorney Donald Sponseller, who worked with the two officers on the investigation, likewise declined comment on the arrest. He said a preliminary hearing would be arranged later unless Shipley waived it, in which case he could post bond and await action of the grand jury.

Find Abandoned Car

Officers called after the theft was discovered Friday morning said glass in a rear door of the Davis garage had been broken, giving the thief access to the show room. State police at Bel Air found the abandoned car the next afternoon.

Shipley was accused in the charge of "breaking and entering the premises of the Walter H. Davis Company, and stealing therefrom an automobile."

In the charge on which he was sentenced in 1939, Shipley was accused of stealing a car and accessories from a Reistertown automobile agency.

Delaware Senator And Wife Killed In an Explosion

OCEAN CITY, Md., Oct. 7 (AP)—A Delaware state senator and his wife perished today in an explosion which rocked their thirty-nine-foot cruiser two and one-half miles out in the Atlantic. Three others were rescued after the captain, his clothing aflame, plunged into the sea, then climbed back aboard to distribute life preservers.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Steel of Ocean View, Del., were the victims, and Capt. T. E. Phillips of the coast guard said both apparently died from heart attacks. Steel was knocked into the sea by the blast, and his wife died in the water, kept afloat by a life preserver.

Philips said Capt. William Murray told him a spark apparently ignited gasoline when he attempted to start the engine. His clothing ablaze, he leaped into the sea, then returned and got life preservers to Mrs. Steel, John A. Tubbs of Selbyville, Del., and Mrs. Elliott Evans, of Ocean View. All jumped into the water and were picked up by coast guardsmen and a passing boatman. The sirvivors were treated for burns and their thirty-minute exposure in the water.

Frederick County Fair Opens Today

FREDERICK, Md., Oct. 7 (AP)—Boasting new buildings necessitated by an increase of exhibits, sponsors of the Frederick county fair were ready tonight for the opening tomorrow of their eighth annual show.

Two new buildings for cattle, and an addition to the barn for horses were open and filled tonight with live stock which is expected to be a main center of interest in this rich agricultural section.

Officials said entries in many divisions were crowded to capacity, and most exhibits were larger than last year. The two new cattle barns will accommodate 132 animals, and the horse barn, with the addition, has a capacity of 100 entries.

The four-day fair will maintain a continuous program of entertainment, ranging from the judging of exhibits to fireworks displays. The latter will climax grandstand shows on Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Harness and running races will be held the first three afternoons. The final afternoon feature Friday will be a "thrill" program in front of the grandstand.

Two Army Fliers Killed in Crash

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 7 (AP)—Two army fliers died today as their two-seated attack ship crashed against the side of a mountain.

The victims were believed to be Lieut. James E. Mather of Salt Lake City and Prite Homer C. Lloyd of Rosebud, Mont. A watch bearing Mather's name was taken from one of the bodies, both of which were burned.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Britishers, already buoyed by official optimism over the progress of the battle of Britain, can find fresh encouragement in news of Balkan developments.

Substantial forces of German troops—and possibly Italian also—have been dispatched into Rumania, for "precautionary" purposes, according to Berlin. Protection of Rumanian oil resources from possible sabotage by British agents is the hinted motive. However, the nature of the force, reported in some quarters to include all arms, suggests that uncertainty over Russia's future role might be the real explanation.

Certainly Russia alone, not Britain, could threaten Rumania's shrivled frontier. Germany commitments to protect those frontiers, fixed by Berlin fiat, were announced as the reason for the march into that troubled country.

Need Oil for Winter

Coming close after the Hitler-Mussolini meeting, the Rumanian oil for the German and Italian war machines was a prime matter discussed in Brenner pass. Rising British confidence of turning the tables on Germany rests in part on the expectation that the Nazis eventually will run short of oil.

Any fresh disorder in Rumania this winter could be a serious matter for the Axis mates, whether the disorder arose from internal or external pressure. With the Danube frozen and Rumania's rail lines inadequate, the task of maintaining a sufficient oil flow will be difficult in any case. It was troublesome for Germany last winter before the terrific drain of active warfare in the west began to sap reserves.

Much Gas Consumed

London officials recently estimated that the air attack on England had already consumed all aviation gasoline stocks captured by the Germans in continental victories. They report that Nazi air craft shot down in England show evidence of a shortage of high test fuel. Some planes were said to be equipped to take off and land on high test but to fly on lower grade gasoline.

If that is true, it helps explain the Balkan developments, and underscores the German march into Rumania to protect that vital war-making resource from either sabotage or possible Russian anti-Axis maneuvering.

Moscow's reaction to the new German-Italian-Japanese pact has not been all that its authors could desire. For whatever reason, the rumored trip to Moscow by Nazi Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop to enlarge the scope of that tri-partite gesture has not yet come off. It may have been deferred, or abandoned.

Friction Suggested

The sending of a completely equipped Nazi army to Rumania to guard that country from an invasion that could come only from Russia suggests increasing friction, not friendship, between Moscow and the Axis.

Whatever it bodes, the German move in Rumania can hardly fail to encourage bomb-battered Britain both because it denotes obvious Axis concern over oil stocks, and because of the imponderable Russian angle.

was such that the whole horizon of the city was a constant succession of cone-shaped flashes, while light, medium and possibly heavy guns in the interior of the city chorused in such volume that windows of buildings rattled.

The roofs rattled with falling shell fragments.

It is difficult for even the most experienced observers to determine whether certain rocking explosions are bombs or merely crashing volleys from whole batteries of anti-aircraft guns.

In any event, several times during this raid there were such resounding blasts that doubts were almost erased.

Detours Through Troy

Setting out for Saratoga battlefield, with Mrs. Roosevelt and Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York riding with him, the president detoured through Troy. Yelling people in unnumbered thousands lined the streets, children on bicycles wheeled along beside the caravan of cars, factory whistles and fire engine sirens wailed lustily.

On a less elaborate scale, it was much the same story as the president rolled in turn through Cohoes, Waterford, Mechanicville, Stillwater, Schuylesville, Saratoga Springs and other small towns on the way back to Albany.

It said also that "authentic reports indicate that German and other foreign corporations enjoy a measure of control over some of our most important defense industries."

Meantime, the House completed Congressional action on a bill which Rep. Voorhis (D-Calif), its author, said would require the Communist party, the German-American Bund and the Nazi party to file detailed reports with the justice department.

The following types of organization would have to register with the department:

(2) Organizations engaged both in political activity and military activity.

(4) Organizations whose aim is to overthrow the United States government by force, violence or military measures.

Causes of Child Becoming Tired Are Discussed

Bad Tonsils Not Always to Blame for Fatigue among Children

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

As civilization progresses, more knowledge accumulates and each successive year the children who reach school age have more duties, more things to learn. Some children can stand the pace, but more and more, the number of cases of malnutrition, nervous breakdowns, behavior disorders in school children reveal or suggest a background of over-burdening.

Parents, mothers especially, are curiously blind to these things and they have a naive belief that fixing the teeth or removing the tonsils or some such thing is behind John or Mabel's listlessness of headaches.

Listlessness Often Tiredness

A colleague of mine who is a specialist in nose and throat diseases, has a great deal of work among school children. He tells me of a typical case of a little boy whose mother brought him to the doctor's office to consult about having the tonsils removed. The boy had steadily failed to gain weight. The doctor, somewhat to the mother's surprise, instead of examining the boy's throat, began to ask questions. He found out that besides going to school, the child went to the movies three nights a week and had a piano lesson and a dancing lesson and Sunday school.

A normal child who does not complain of fatigue should, of course, be let alone to play as much as he likes and spend his heaven-sent energy any way he chooses. Fatigue, however, is a signal from nature, and we should be responsive to it in the most natural way in the world, which is to control the expenditure of energy. This includes emotional as well as as physical expenditure. Along this line stop fussing with children about what they eat—if they prefer candy to carrots, spinach and salad, it simply proves that some deep instinct is telling them that candy supplies energy quicker than rabbit food.

Thomas Sees U. S. in War on Two Oceans

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for president, said here that "America's greatest immediate peril" was involvement of war on two oceans and two continents "by reason of an insanely dangerous far eastern policy."

Under this policy, he added in a radio speech (MBS), President Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie "seem almost equally willing to gamble the lives and fortunes of 130 million Americans, in an effort to preserve western rather eastern imperialism."

"To play a game of bluff and threat with the Japanese militarists," Thomas continued, "is to risk the most costly war in our history. It would be a war for which our government would have partially armed the Japanese by its continuing purchase of Japanese gold which purchases helped to finance Japanese purchase of American scrap metal."

Baby With Heart Outside Body Dies

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 7 (AP)—A three-day-old girl, born with her heart outside her body, died at Children's hospital.

The child, first born to an unnamed eastern Oregon couple, was brought to the hospital yesterday after a 400-mile automobile trip.

O'Conor To Debate With Republicans

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 6 (AP)—Governor O'Conor announced here he had accepted an invitation to represent the Democratic party in a debate with representatives of the Republican and Socialist parties at Philadelphia Oct. 15.

The debate, sponsored by the Philadelphia forum, will be held in the Academy of Music that night.

The governor said that Dr. Ruth Alexander of Chicago, would represent the Republican party, and Davis H. H. Felix, Socialist candidate for the U. S. Senate in Pennsylvania, would speak for his party.

Felix, vice-chairman of the Socialist party, is seeking the seat of Senator Joseph F. Guffey. O'Conor said Guffey had requested the Democratic National Committee to invite him to represent the party.

Browder Wants U. S. To Join with Russia

BOSTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—Development of a "Washington-Moscow Chungking Axis was urged here by Earl Browder as the only way the United States could "win through, for itself and for the world, out of the present dangers and bloody chaos, into a new world of peace, order and well-being for all peoples."

The Communist party's general secretary in the United States and its candidate for president, asserted in a speech prepared for a symphony hall audience, that the combination would be "unmatchable in world politics."

He charged that the United States' foreign policy in the last decade had been "at every major point either an adaptation or an outright copy of the British policy—"the source of most of the disasters of Europe, Asia and Africa"—which he said "deliberately brought Hitler into power in Germany and gave the chief, the indispensable, help for the German armaments that now strike at the British Isles."

Polar Bear Kills Mate in a Zoo

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 7 (AP)—Big Bill, a sullen Polar bear, solved his family troubles quickly here by killing his mate in a fight at Fleishhacker zoo and then holding her under water for several minutes with a bloody paw.

Hundreds of Sunday visitors, attracted by the roar of the animals, saw the brief fight, which police and zoo attendants were unable to stop in time to save Min, the victim.

Jerry, a third bear in the pit, retreated to safety when the quarrel started.

Tonight, Big Bill sat alone in the bear pit, gazing defiantly out at the world of man, which will decide his fate.

The largest historical compilation ever made is the "War of the Rebellion," comprising 120 large 1,000 page volumes. It weighs 500 pounds, and a set of these books occupies thirty feet of shelf space.

Fire Destroys Big Canning Plant

MARTINSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 7 (AP)—Fire, raging out of control, swept through the Van Camp-Stokely packing plant here and threatened to sweep on to this city's residential district.

The factory, covering four city blocks, was feared a total loss. Unofficial estimates of the damage ran as high as $800,000.

The fire started about 7 o'clock in a lumber storeroom and spread quickly before a high west wind through the three-story cannery and a two-story office, both of frame construction.

Moving eastward toward the residential section, it set fire to one house and threatened box cars in the Pennsylvania railroad yards. Switching crews started moving the cars.

Firemen were called from surrounding cities to help fight the flames.

The canning plant, which put up mostly tomatoes and tomato products, employed 650 persons.

The factory itself was reported worth about $500,000 and the stock about 300,000.

Causes of Child Becoming Tired Are Discussed

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

As civilization progresses, more knowledge accumulates and each successive year the children who reach school age have more duties, more things to learn. Some children can stand the pace, but more and more, the number of cases of malnutrition, nervous breakdowns, behavior disorders in school children reveal or suggest a background of over-burdening.

Parents, mothers especially, are curiously blind to these things and they have a naive belief that fixing the teeth or removing the tonsils or some such thing is behind John or Mabel's listlessness of headaches.

Listlessness Often Tiredness

A colleague of mine who is a specialist in nose and throat diseases, has a great deal of work among school children. He tells me of a typical case of a little boy whose mother brought him to the doctor's office to consult about having the tonsils removed. The boy had steadily failed to gain weight. The doctor, somewhat to the mother's surprise, instead of examining the boy's throat, began to ask questions. He found out that besides going to school, the child went to the movies three nights a week and had a piano lesson and a dancing lesson and Sunday school.

A normal child who does not complain of fatigue should, of course, be let alone to play as much as he likes and spend his heaven-sent energy any way he chooses. Fatigue, however, is a signal from nature, and we should be responsive to it in the most natural way in the world, which is to control the expenditure of energy. This includes emotional as well as as physical expenditure. Along this line stop fussing with children about what they eat—if they prefer candy to carrots, spinach and salad, it simply proves that some deep instinct is telling them that candy supplies energy quicker than rabbit food.

The New Deal March Toward Socialism

NOT LONG SINCE, at a banquet held at the Shrine club, a distinguished Cumberland citizen handed a mental jolt to the diners in a reminder of the menace overhanging the life insurance business of the country, in the course of which he bluntly declared that, as a matter of cold fact, the government had already "taken over the banks of the country."

It may well be wondered whether people realize the fateful distance the government of the United States has already traveled on the road toward national socialism under the so-called New Deal administration. We have, in fact, gone so far along that dangerous road that many can be excused for being dubious whether it will be possible for us not to go the whole way.

In the field of banking, our speaker was absolutely correct. Banking for some time past has no longer been a private enterprise. It is controlled by the government at Washington. It has also been driven to pot by competition of a multitude of agencies set up by the government. The average citizen, perhaps, does not realize to what extent this competition has gone because it has been taken up subtly, step by step, until, in the parlance of the vernacular, the government has now just about "gone the whole hog."

An examination of the list of banking and credit agencies that have been set up by the New Dealers will doubtless prove startling to some who have not thought much about this phase of the New Deal trend toward socialism. Here are some—not all—of the branch banks and lending agencies Uncle Sam now has on his hands, practically all of which came under the New Deal, in addition to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, an agency created under a Republican administration for meeting the depression situation, which has more than justified itself:

Central Bank for Co-operatives.
Commodity Credit Corporation.
Disaster Loan Corporation.
District Banks for Co-operatives.
Electric Home and Farm Authority.
Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Office.
Export-Import Bank of Washington.
Farm Credit Administration.
Farm Security Administration.
Federal Credit Unions.
Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.
Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works.
Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.
Federal Home Loan Banks.
Federal Housing Administration.
Federal Intermediate Credit Banks.
Federal Land Banks.
Federal Savings and Loan Associations.
Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.
Home Owners' Loan Corporation.
Housing Division, Public Works Administration.
Indiana Rehabilitation Loan Office.
Inland Waterways Corporation.
Land Bank Commissioner.
National Farm Loan Associations.
National Mortgage Associations.
Production Credit Associations.
Production Credit Corporation.
Puerto Rican Reconstruction Administration.
Reconstruction Finance Mortgage Company.
Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation.
Resettlement Administration.
Rural Electrification Administration.
Tennessee Valley Authority.
United States Housing Authority.
United States Maritime Commission.

In addition to these there are the United States Postal Savings system and the Federal Reserve banks.

This is not to say that every one of these is a useless agency in this bureaucratic setup, as, for instance, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. The list is given here merely as a reminder of the enormous extent in one single field of private endeavor the New Deal administration has advanced.

The citation here can be duplicated in numerous other fields and reminders of each, similar to this one, would singly as well as in aggregate shock the minds of those unaware of the long march already taken on the road to socialism.

Do we want national socialism here in this country, which would, as in Germany, most likely terminate in a dictatorship, a step toward which is already manifest in the third-term movement? This is a grave question citizens should now seriously ponder.

Willkie Gains in Two Important States

WE ARE GETTING reports of all kinds of straw vote polls on the presidential election and some of the recent ones indicate an acceleration of the Willkie trend.

Two of the large pivotal states are Illinois and New York; and reports from both indicates that Willkie will win both. Fulton Lewis, Jr., radio commentator, speaking from Chicago, has given an account of the Illinois situation, which is encouraging to Republican forces. Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, manager of the Willkie campaign, reports that his own polls show Willkie making a "hoss race" in New York, which he should win.

Martin is not to be classed as a wild or hopeful guesser. He gained some prestige as a forecaster in 1938 when he listed in advance the Republican gains in the congressional election almost to the exact number. Martin says his privately conducted poll shows that in New York Mr. Willkie made a gain of two per cent in the last week to bring the division to a fifty-fifty basis between the two candidates. This poll showed the division upstate to be sixty-three per cent for Willkie and thirty-seven per cent for Roosevelt. In New York city the division was exactly the reverse. With slightly more votes cast upstate than in New York city, Mr. Martin said this gave Mr. Willkie the edge as of today.

In 1939 the upstate vote was Alfred M. Landon, 1,514,719; President Roosevelt, 1,251,875. In New York city the vote was Landon, 665,951; Roosevelt, 2,041,347. Confident of boosting the Republican majority upstate to more than 500,000 this year, the Republicans are being led by Mr. Willkie in strategy to cut down the normal Democratic margin in the city to make victory possible.

In this connection the results of a postcard straw poll just held by the Syracuse, N. Y., Post-Standard is significant. It indicates that Onondaga county voters will give Willkie a record plurality. A margin of 50,000 to 60,000 for the Republican presidential nominee on an estimated vote of 140,000 is forecast by the poll, the Post-Standard reported.

The only Republican candidate to approach that number of votes was Calvin Coolidge with a plurality of 40,600 in 1924. Alfred M. Landon netted a plurality of 17,500 in 1936 while Herbert Hoover won only 4,100 in 1932.

Those Junketing Tours Of Mr. Roosevelt

THE SO-CALLED INSPECTION TOURS being made by Mr. Roosevelt, which are aptly caricatured by "Ding" on this page today, are allegedly "non-political." But, if so, it is rather peculiar that they are being made into sections whence unfavorable reports as to the status of the New Deal campaign come and immediately after their receipt. At the same time, they are being characterized by responsible persons as being "futile" and a "wastage of time" so far as national defense is concerned.

For instance, W. Frank Roberts, chairman of the Maryland Council of Defense and Resources, is of opinion that so far as the recent junket into Maryland was concerned, some of the high officials of the administration and the military services who came to Maryland with the president would have been doing more to advance defense if they had remained at work in Washington. Roberts said the inspection group "saw nothing of importance at Aberdeen," and that it was supposed to inspect the plant of the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft Company, but for some reason the doors were closed, "so we saw nothing at the Glenn Martin plant."

Mr. Roosevelt, it seems, continues to be the astute politician, regardless of emergencies.

Another Warning On Sabotage

DR. C. RAY HANSEN, noted Chicago investigator, related to local Rotarians the other day numerous instances of sabotage in American industrial plants, and the untiring efforts of government secret service men and other investigators to run them down and to nip others in the bud.

The reports made by Dr. Hansen were notable for the fact that sabotage has repeatedly occurred in strategic points of a plant. In many instances destruction or damage of patterns was sought.

From Youngstown, O., has just come an Associated Press dispatch telling of a spectacular fire that destroyed the old shafting mill building of the Republican Steel Corporation works, a three-story wooden structure used for storage of wood patterns and machinery.

Evidently another case of sabotage, and it is another warning that American industry, as well as law enforcement officers, must be on guard at these strategic points.

It is a touching spectacle—that of the Nordic blood brothers, the Germans and the Japs, pledging allegiance unto starvation.

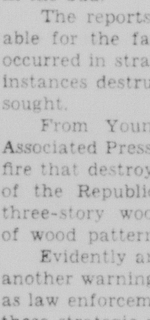
The city of Dong Dang and the Wangpoo river prove one thing: That when Chinese name a place, they like to do it with sound effects.

How Shall a Man Live?

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I have heard that nothing survives long in this world unless it is true, unless it is strong, unless it is useful.

Then how about that old chestnut, "It's not what you do, but what you are that counts?"



Marshall Maslin

That's the sort of thing that people say in defeat, in self-pity. I imagine a Napoleon murmuring it to himself on his way back from Moscow. I hear every feeble rebel, every foolish fellow, every inadequate apologist for defeat, weeping into his own breast and crying, "After all, it's not what I DO, but what I AM, that counts in history."

But it's NOT true!

What we are, stands still. What we do, moves. What we are is a picture on the wall, what we do is the effect of that picture on those who see it. What we are is a book on the shelf, what we do is the story in that book bringing tears to the eyes of a reader. . . . What we are sits in a corner by itself. What we do moves through the crowd and weaves a pattern of challenge and example. What we are may reach feebly for a star, but what we do holds that glowing star in human hands and holds it aloft for all to see.

I strive and I fail. Men see me striving. They are the spectators of my failure. They hear me whine, "I did my best." They hear me cry, "It's not what I do but what I am that counts and makes up the vital sum of me." . . . But they do not believe me. They know better. They know, in their hearts, that my striving was the better part of me, that even my failure was more important than my melancholy sitting down and vain self-consolation.

* * *

I strive and I succeed. Men see my victory pay only incidental attention to what I am. I have done something and though they may damn my deed, they know that for better or for worse I have achieved something and I am a force. . . . I do not praise action for the sake of action, but I praise it because I know as every man knows that stumbling, faltering, valiant endeavor is nobler by far than inert, immobile goodness, however fair, however sweet to contemplate.

Campaign Reaches Dead Cat Stage, Gen. Johnson Says

By HUGH H. JOHNSON

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 7 (Delayed)—This campaign is certainly fast getting into the dead cat, ripe egg and rotten tomato stage.

Hugh Johnson

Not to mention the actual heaving of these spoiled groceries, the New Dealers now insist that theirs is a fight to keep Hitler out of the White House. They scarcely mention the fact that there is another guy running — named Willkie.

Don't imagine that you have smelled the last of this dead herring dragged across the trail by both Henry Wallace and Governor Lehman. Their command performance may be just the build-up for smellier fish.

The conductor of a New York gossip column, whose stuff is usually remarkably accurate and whose sources of information seem to be everywhere—predicts an explosive "revelation" designed to put Mr. Willkie in the ash can for keeps.

Rumors are rife as to what form this expose will take—and there are some facts. According to press reports, General Bob Wood the guiding genius of a great Chicago mail order house, was approached recently by a German "commercial traveler"—they are not yet outlawed here.

Business Men Approached

This man of business discussed with Wood certain promising commercial connections to be made "after the war." They all happened to be along the line of General Wood's known interests and hobbies. Later Bob heard that other prominent business friends of his had been similarly approached. He naturally reported these incidents to the government and that seemed to be that.

Now it is learned that other business men, some of whom are for Willkie, have been similarly approached to Teutonic "drummers"—some if not all of whom are being, and ought to be, neatly tailed by competent secret service men. Just who these Germans are and when and where would, as a matter of routine, be then accurately reported. What a dish it would be then for some member of the janissariat having access to such reports to compile, abstract and digest them and—about October 15—break an explosive charge that the business supporters of Willkie are in bed with Nazi agents, that the Republican party is a Fifth Column and Mr. Willkie an intending gauleiter.

Absurd Nonsense

Of course, the whole foundation and structure of such a build-up would be absurd nonsense. Such conversations as Gen. Wood's are innocent and unavoidable. They are no more subversive than our State department's conversations with agents of the German embassy. We haven't even broken off diplomatic relations with Germany. But in the hysteria, emotion and hatred that has been built up, nonsensical absurdity would be overlooked by many. The whole development is just a synthetic dead cat or rotten tomato of a different and more subtle construction.

Hitler, himself, with all the genius of Goebels, never accomplished as great results in blinding as many people to his terrible machinations as has the janissariat. They have succeeded in chloroforming a third term tradition of 125 years' standing—reodorizing the Hitlerized bludgeoning of the Democratic convention in the blatant third term "draft" and the forcible feeding of Henry Wallace to the Democratic party—obscuring in the public mind the record of awful Fourth New Deal failure on every domestic policy on debt, taxes, re-employment, recovery and farm relief and a more awful and dangerous failure in foreign policy and defense.

Masterpiece of Demagoguery

It stands as a masterpiece in impudent efficiency in propaganda and demagoguery. Putting over this impending fake "Fifth Column" melodramatic absurdity sounds like an impossibility, but it is nothing compared to what has already been accomplished along similar lines.

Perhaps this will never happen. I am writing this column in the hope that it won't. Stink bombs can be so easily avoided if there is some warning of their coming, so that sometimes intending bombers hold their fire. But I dunno. An influence strong and bold enough to persuade decent men like Henry Wallace and Herbert Lehman to throw that Hitler dead cat are bold enough to try anything.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

NO TIME FOR POLITICS--TOO BUSY WITH THE WAR

Record Is Cited To Refute Michelson Alibi on Abuse of Executive Powers

By FRANKLYN WALTMAN

Our contemporary, the Democratic publicity director, in his weekly letter, expresses irritation because it has been suggested that Candidate Roosevelt's bid for a third term violates every tradition of American government and is a step toward dictatorship. With tears in his aging eyes, he expresses pain that anyone should think that Candidate Roosevelt grab off power.

Franklyn Waltman

"What kind of a dictator is it," he asks, "who could wait seven years in the office of the nation's chief executive to make the first step in the dreaded direction?"

Of course, one answer to this charge of dictatorship against Candidate Roosevelt is that a dictator must first know what he wants to do and then do it. Certainly, there is little evidence that Candidate Roosevelt knows what he wants to do from one day to the next—except remain in office.

Is It True?

Be that as it may, let's ponder calmly and deliberately the question which Smear Artist Michelson projects. Is it true that Candidate Roosevelt has waited seven years in the chief executive's office without making one step toward grabbing off power which does not rightfully belong to the president of this nation?

There seems little dispute that the present White House occupant today enjoys greater power than any other president of the United States had. How did he get it? By cajoling a subservient Congress; by using the most extreme pressure on that body, even to the extent of demanding the passage of legislation without regard to its constitutionality. What is the proof of that statement? Well, the supreme court declared a number of pieces of New Deal legislation unconstitutional—some by unanimous votes with the concurrence of such justices as Louis D. Brandeis.

But let's cite a more recent example of the way a dictator acts. Some weeks ago Candidate Roosevelt secretly negotiated a deal with the British empire involving an exchange of destroyers and naval bases. He disregarded the Congress in such negotiations — kept it in ignorance of what was going on—actually denied to the press that such a deal was being negotiated.

We Must Wait Ten Years

On its conclusion, Candidate Roosevelt told Congress what he had done. He did not ask approval of Congress. Instead he sent Congress an opinion by his subservient attorney general, asserting all was legal. But he did not reveal all. Asked about this at a press conference, Candidate Roosevelt said the country would find out all the details about ten years from now when the State department archives regarding events this year are opened.

Is that the manner in which American presidents act? Is it the manner in which Adolph Hitler rules Germany? You answer. History shows that one of the first steps of would-be dictators is to short-circuit the legislative bodies of their countries—confront them with events when done and too late to stop them. A little later on the legislative body is not even told what has been done—and finally it is sent home as an annoyance.

That is what is in store for the American Congress if the third term movement succeeds. Our third term president will not even bother to let the people's representatives in Congress know what he does.

The Case of Elliott Roosevelt

Another example is the scandalous appointment of 30-year-old Elliott Roosevelt, the third term candidate's second son, to a captaincy in the procurement division of the army on the eve of the registration for conscription. Young Mr. Roosevelt has never seen a day of military service. He has no particular qualifications to be a captain in the army.

But because he is the president's son—and there appear to be no other reasons—he is made a swivel-chair captain while the sons of millions of every day American folks must be subjected to conscription, to a year of grueling military training at $30 a month and perhaps to service and death in a trench on some foreign battlefield.

Of course, the sons of ordinary folks in the dictator countries should not expect to be captains. They are supposed to be privates—the cannon fodder of war, single-handedly brought about by the dictator. Positions of rank are reserved for the sons of the ruling class—for royalty. Apparently the Roosevelts already regard themselves as entitled to the prerogatives of royalty for three of the sons hold commissions. Without a day of military training, you will recall, James had himself made a lieutenant-colonel of marines several years ago. Franklin D., Jr., holds an ensign's commission in the naval reserve.

The Case of Wendell Willkie

In the World war, Wendell Willkie enlisted as a private. He spent four months intensive training before he was commissioned as a lieutenant. He spent another year in trainnig camps in this country and was then sent to France where he served under fire. Just before the armistice he was recommended for promotion to a captaincy. All of his commanders approved the recommendation but he never became a captain because when the war ended President Wilson suspended all pending promotions. But Elliott Roosevelt, without spending a day in a training camp, is appointed a captain.

Is it any wonder that the case of Elliott Roosevelt has made the blood of every World war veteran boil? Such things do not happen in a democracy. They do happen in countries ruled by men lustful for power—indispensable men who seek to perpetuate themselves in office.

The Coddling Of Elliott

From the Hampshire, W. Va., Review

In recent issues we have discussed the conscription or draft law in these columns with particular reference to its fair and impartial administration of which we thought our people could be assured. Any one not close to the situation, and but few were close to it, can not understand the pressure exerted in 1917 to obtain exemptions. Mr. Cornwell made hearty and lasting enemies of some politicians in his own party, when he ordered appeals on exemptions of their kin allowed by some local draft boards. It was the belief of President Woodrow Wilson and of General Crowder that absolute fairness and impartiality were necessary if the people were to be expected to support the government in its war efforts. Mr. Cornwell shared that belief, and picked men for the draft boards who also shared it, as a rule. He removed the draft board in one county which, inadvertently, had shaken the faith of the people in its impartiality and resisted pressure for favoritism of any kind. The result was the state made a record and the draft machinery worked without a hitch.

While the country is not at war it may be on the verge of it. Anyway hundreds of thousands of young men are to be drafted and sent to the army. The same necessity for confidence and public support of the system exists now as in 1917.

The appointment of the president's son, Elliott Roosevelt, (of draft age) as a captain in the air corps, procurement division, will not tend to strengthen public confidence in this conscription set up. Young Roosevelt is not an aviator. Nor will he be one. He will draw $200 per month as against a maximum of $30 for those who are drafted into the service. He is to "procure" something or other—supplies, perhaps, though, when inquiry was made it was said he would be a "specialist." A further inquiry as to what was meant was met with the reply: "Confidential."

When the president appointed his eldest son, "Jimmy" to a $10,000 a year job at the White House little was said. That was a political job. But now when hundreds of thousands of young men are to be drafted into army service for another of the president's sons to be safely ensconed as a captain in the air corps, procurement division — well are the American people so hypnotized by the antics of one family that they will swallow anything?

Enterprise Is Key To Newspaperdom, Edwin Hill Says

BY EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

I remember that in my early days in the newspaper business there was a rather exquisite youth, not long out of college, who used to murmur, "What this newspaper needs is elan." I don't know whether we had elan or not, but we did go out hell-for-leather after news, and when you hit the front page with a nice little yarn all your own, you were the kid that built the pyramid, nothing less. It seems like elan, in the backward look.

We have been pondering some of these matters in connection with the celebration of Newspaper week. In newspapering, as in other crafts, old men dream dreams and young men are victims. It is quite possible that both miss certain realities by living too much in the past or the future. It's hard to make comparisons as to the comparative rating on "elan," "git-up-and-git," or whatever it was that college lad was talking about.

Bow for Bomb Dodgers

But right at the start, here's a low bow to the boys who have been ducking bombs for the last few years in Ethiopia, Spain, Poland, France, England and waypoints. They must be homesick for a nice, comfortable long war, or a soothing train wreck or the lullaby of mere nightsticks tunking recalcitrant skulls along the police beat. When it comes to big stories, they may shoot the rest of us, as did Noah when a newcomer in heaven began bragging about what he did in the Johnstown flood.

The above exploits by dare-devil lads getting news, along with the moving pictures, are making newspapering an exceedingly romantic occupation among young people. The question I hear oftenest from the youngsters is "How do I get to be a newspaperman?" I tell them the story of my friend Lawrence Perry, writer of short stories and novels, and syndicated sports writer.

A Wet Start

When he was scarcely dry behind the ears, he applied for a job at the old Evening Sun. They told him to walk up South Street and along the East river and pick up a story. Along the Lower East Side, he saw what appeared to be a battleship, moving up the river. As it neared Twenty-sixth street, its guns were belching. Young Perry had "elan." He slid down the post of a pier into a rowboat, cut it loose and pursued the ship.

There was a landing party at the Yacht Club pier, with plumed officers going ashore. Perry headed into the ceremony but "caught a crab"—that is, he mishandled his boat, half filled it with water and almost swamped it. But he stood up, yelled to the ship's officer and asked him what it was all about. The most imposing among them bade him come ashore.

On His Way

Wet and dripping, Perry landed. The impressive officer identified himself as Commodore Dewey. He explained that he had taken the new gunboat on a trial trip and this was a ceremonial welcome by the Yacht Club. But there had been all sorts of exciting adventures on the trip. The boy had a story, and six months later this same Commodore Dewey would be Admiral Dewey. Perry ran all the way to the office and was brokenhearted when they handed his story to O'Neil Sevier to write, But he was on his way as a newspaperman.

The best sample of old-time reporter enterprise, which Hollywood would love, is, of course, the classic of Ike White and how he solved the crime when the police failed. Ike was a police reporter for the Morning world. A bomb had been tossed into the office of Russell Sage, but it killed, not the financier, as intended, but the bomb-thrower himself. There was no scrap of evidence leading to the bomb-thrower's identity, until Ike White found one. He picked up a button from the man's trousers. As a pants button, it was entirely undistinguished.

On Long Trail

Ike covered every tailor shop in New York without any luck. Toward the end of his string, he found a tailer who thought they used buttons like that up in New England. He took up the trail to Boston, again visiting all the tailer shops. He found a man who said a tailor in nearby Roxbury used such buttons. In Roxbury, there was a tailor who had used such buttons on a suit made for a man named Norcross, who lived in Brookline. Norcross had been missing two weeks. His full identification was established. He was the bomb-thrower.

There, my hearties, is a slant on how you get into the newspaper business and how you stay in it. Hollywood dolls it up a lot, but I am convinced that it is still romantic, and as Booth Tarkington's old printer used to say, "a nice, loose trade."—Copyright, 1940, King Feature Syndicate, Inc.

The New Deal March Toward Socialism

NOT LONG SINCE, at a banquet held at the Shrine club, a distinguished Cumberland citizen handed a mental jolt to the diners in a reminder of the menace overhanging the life insurance business of the country, in the course of which he bluntly declared that, as a matter of cold fact, the government had already "taken over the banks of the country."

It may well be wondered whether people realize the fateful distance the government of the United States has already traveled on the road toward national socialism under the so-called New Deal administration. We have, in fact, gone so far along that dangerous road that many can be excused for being dubious whether it will be possible for us not to go the whole way.

In the field of banking, our speaker was absolutely correct. Banking for some time past has no longer been a private enterprise. It is controlled by the government at Washington. It has also been driven to pot by competition of a multitude of agencies set up by the government. The average citizen, perhaps, does not realize to what extent this competition has gone because it has been taken up subtly, step by step, until, in the parlance of the vernacular, the government has now just about "gone the whole hog."

An examination of the list of banking and credit agencies that have been set up by the New Dealers will doubtless prove startling to some who have not thought much about this phase of the New Deal trend toward socialism. Here are some—not all—of the branch banks and lending agencies Uncle Sam now has on his hands, practically all of which came under the New Deal, in addition to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, an agency created under a Republican administration for meeting the depression situation, which has more than justified itself:

Central Bank for Co-operatives.
Commodity Credit Corporation.
Disaster Loan Corporation.
District Banks for Co-operatives.
Electric Home and Farm Authority.
Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Office.
Export-Import Bank of Washington.
Farm Credit Administration.
Farm Security Administration.
Federal Credit Unions.
Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.
Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works.
Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.
Federal Home Loan Banks.
Federal Housing Administration.
Federal Intermediate Credit Banks.
Federal Land Banks.
Federal Savings and Loan Associations.
Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.
Home Owners' Loan Corporation.
Housing Division, Public Works Administration.
Indiana Rehabilitation Loan Office.
Inland Waterways Corporation.
Land Bank Commissioner.
National Farm Loan Associations.
National Mortgage Associations.
Production Credit Associations.
Production Credit Corporation.
Puerto Rican Reconstruction Administration.
Reconstruction Finance Mortgage Company.
Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation.
Resettlement Administration.
Rural Electrification Administration.
Tennessee Valley Authority.
United States Housing Authority.
United States Maritime Commission.

In addition to these there are the United States Postal Savings system and the Federal Reserve banks.

This is not to say that every one of these is a useless agency in this bureaucratic setup, as, for instance, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. The list is given here merely as a reminder of the enormous extent in one single field of private endeavor the New Deal administration has advanced.

The citation here can be duplicated in numerous other fields and reminders of each, similar to this one, would singly as well as in aggregate shock the minds of those unaware of the long march already taken on the road to socialism.

Do we want national socialism here in this country, which would, as in Germany, most likely terminate in a dictatorship, a step toward which is already manifest in the third-term movement? This is a grave question citizens should now seriously ponder.

Willkie Gains in Two Important States

WE ARE GETTING reports of all kinds of straw vote polls on the presidential election and some of the recent ones indicate an acceleration of the Willkie trend.

Two of the large pivotal states are Illinois and New York; and reports from both indicates that Willkie will win both. Fulton Lewis, Jr., radio commentator, speaking from Chicago, has given an account of the Illinois situation, which is encouraging to Republican forces. Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, manager of the Willkie campaign, reports that his own polls show Willkie making a "hoss race" in New York, which he should win.

Martin is not to be classed as a wild or hopeful guesser. He gained some prestige as a forecaster in 1938 when he listed in advance the Republican gains in the congressional election almost to the exact number. Martin says his privately conducted poll shows that in New York Mr. Willkie made a gain of two per cent in the last week to bring the division to a fifty-fifty basis between the two candidates. This poll showed the division upstate to be sixty-three per cent for Willkie and thirty-seven per cent for Roosevelt. In New York city the division was exactly the reverse. With slightly more votes cast upstate than in New York city, Mr. Martin said this gave Mr. Willkie the edge as of today.

In 1939 the upstate vote was Alfred M. Landon, 1,514,719; President Roosevelt, 1,251,875. In New York city the vote was Landon, 665,951; Roosevelt, 2,041,347. Confident of boosting the Republican majority upstate to more than 500,000 this year, the Republicans are being led by Mr. Willkie in strategy to cut down the normal Democratic margin in the city to make victory possible.

In this connection the results of a postcard straw poll just held by the Syracuse, N. Y., Post-Standard is significant. It indicates that Onondaga county voters will give Willkie a record plurality. A margin of 50,000 to 60,000 for the Republican presidential nominee on an estimated vote of 140,000 is forecast by the poll, the Post-Standard reported.

The only Republican candidate to approach that number of votes was Calvin Coolidge with a plurality of 40,600 in 1924. Alfred M. Landon netted a plurality of 17,500 in 1936 while Herbert Hoover won only 4,100 in 1932.

Those Junketing Tours Of Mr. Roosevelt

THE SO-CALLED INSPECTION TOURS being made by Mr. Roosevelt, which are aptly caricatured by "Ding" on this page today, are allegedly "non-political." But, if so, it is rather peculiar that they are being made into sections whence unfavorable reports as to the status of the New Deal campaign come and immediately after their receipt. At the same time, they are being characterized by responsible persons as being "futile" and a "wastage of time" so far as national defense is concerned.

For instance, W. Frank Roberts, chairman of the Maryland Council of Defense and Resources, is of opinion that so far as the recent junket into Maryland was concerned, some of the high officials of the administration and the military services who came to Maryland with the president would have been doing more to advance defense if they had remained at work in Washington. Roberts said the inspection group "saw nothing of importance at Aberdeen," and that it was supposed to inspect the plant of the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft Company, but for some reason the doors were closed, "so we saw nothing at the Glenn Martin plant."

Mr. Roosevelt, it seems, continues to be the astute politician, regardless of emergencies.

Another Warning On Sabotage

DR. C. RAY HANSEN, noted Chicago investigator, related to local Rotarians the other day numerous instances of sabotage in American industrial plants, and the untiring efforts of government secret service men and other investigators to run them down and to nip others in the bud.

The reports made by Dr. Hansen were notable for the fact that sabotage has repeatedly occurred in strategic points of a plant. In many instances destruction or damage of patterns was sought.

From Youngstown, O., has just come an Associated Press dispatch telling of a spectacular fire that destroyed the old shafting mill building of the Republican Steel Corporation works, a three-story wooden structure used for storage of wood patterns and machinery.

Evidently another case of sabotage, and it is another warning that American industry, as well as law enforcement officers, must be on guard at these strategic points.

It is a touching spectacle—that of the Nordic blood brothers, the Germans and the Japs, pledging allegiance unto starvation.

The city of Dong Dang and the Wangpoo river prove one thing: That when Chinese name a place, they like to do it with sound effects.

I strive and I succeed. Men see my victory pay only incidental attention to what I am. I have done something and though they may damn my deed, they know that for better or for worse I have achieved something and I am a force. . . . I do not praise action for the sake of action, but I praise it because I know as every man knows that stumbling, faltering, valiant endeavor is nobler by far than inert, immobile goodness, however fair, however sweet to contemplate.

Campaign Reaches Dead Cat Stage, Gen. Johnson Says

By HUGH H. JOHNSON

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 7 (Delayed)—This campaign is certainly fast getting into the dead cat, ripe egg and rotten tomato stage. Not to mention the actual heaving of these spoiled groceries, the New Dealers now insist that theirs is a fight to keep Hitler out of the White House. They scarcely mention the fact that there is another guy running — named Willkie.

Hugh Johnson

Don't imagine that you have smelled the last of this dead herring dragged across the trail by both Henry Wallace and Governor Lehman. Their command performance may be just the build-up for smellier fish.

The conductor of a New York gossip column, whose stuff is usually remarkably accurate and whose sources of information seem to be everywhere—predicts an explosive "revelation" designed to put Mr. Willkie in the ash can for keeps.

Rumors are rife as to what form this expose will take—and there are some facts. According to press reports, General Bob Wood the guiding genius of a great Chicago mail order house, was approached recently by a German "commercial traveler"—they are not yet outlawed here.

Business Men Approached

This man of business discussed with Wood certain promising commercial connections to be made "after the war." They all happened to be along the line of General Wood's known interests and hobbies. Later Bob heard that other prominent business friends of his had been similarly approached. He naturally reported these incidents to the government and that seemed to be that.

Now it is learned that other business men, some of whom are for Willkie, have been similarly approached to Teutonic "drummers"—some if not all of whom are being, and ought to be, neatly tailed by competent secret service men. Just who these Germans are and when and where would, as a matter of routine, be then accurately reported. What a dish it would be then for some member of the janissariat having access to such reports to compile, abstract and digest them and—about October 15—break an explosive charge that the business supporters of Willkie are in bed with Nazi agents, that the Republican party is a Fifth Column and Mr. Willkie an intending gauleiter.

Absurd Nonsense

Of course, the whole foundation and structure of such a build-up would be absurd nonsense. Such conversations as Gen. Wood's are innocent and unavoidable. They are no more subversive than our State department's conversations with agents of the German embassy. We haven't even broken off diplomatic relations with Germany. But in the hysteria, emotion and hatred that has been built up, nonsensical absurdity would be overlooked by many. The whole development is just a synthetic dead cat or rotten tomato of a different and more subtle construction.

Hitler, himself, with all the genius of Goebels, never accomplished as great results in blinding as many people to his terrible machinations as has the janissariat. They have succeeded in chloroforming a third term tradition of 125 years' standing—reodorizing the Hitlerized bludgeoning of the Democratic convention in the blatant third term "draft" and the forcible feeding of Henry Wallace to the Democratic party—obscuring in the public mind the record of awful Fourth New Deal failure on every domestic policy on debt, taxes, re-employment, recovery and farm relief and a more awful and dangerous failure in foreign policy and defense.

Masterpiece of Demagoguery

It stands as a masterpiece in impudent efficiency in propaganda and demagoguery. Putting over this impending fake "Fifth Column" melodramatic absurdity sounds like an impossibility, but it is nothing compared to what has already been accomplished along similar lines.

Perhaps this will never happen. I am writing this column in the hope that it won't. Stink bombs can be so easily avoided if there is some warning of their coming, so that sometimes intending bombers hold their fire. But I dunno. An influence strong and bold enough to persuade decent men like Henry Wallace and Herbert Lehman to throw that Hitler dead cat are bold enough to try anything.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

NO TIME FOR POLITICS--TOO BUSY WITH THE WAR

By FRANKLYN WALTMAN

Our contemporary, the Democratic publicity director, in his weekly letter, expresses irritation because it has been suggested that Candidate Roosevelt's bid for a third term violates every tradition of American government and is a step toward dictatorship. With tears in his aging eyes, he expresses pain that anyone should think that Candidate Roosevelt grab off power.

Franklyn Waltman

"What kind of a dictator is it," he asks, "who could wait seven years in the office of the nation's chief executive to make the first step in the dreaded direction?"

Of course, one answer to this charge of dictatorship against Candidate Roosevelt is that a dictator must first know what he wants to do and then do it. Certainly, there is little evidence that Candidate Roosevelt knows what he wants to do from one day to the next—except remain in office.

Is It True?

Be that as it may, let's ponder calmly and deliberately the question which Smear Artist Michelson projects. Is it true that Candidate Roosevelt has waited seven years in the chief executive's office without making one step toward grabbing off power which does not rightfully belong to the president of this nation?

There seems little dispute that the present White House occupant today enjoys greater power than any other president of the United States had. How did he get it? By cajoling a subservient Congress; by using the most extreme pressure on that body, even to the extent of demanding the passage of legislation without regard to its constitutionality. What is the proof of that statement? Well, the supreme court declared a number of pieces of New Deal legislation unconstitutional—some by unanimous votes with the concurrence of such justices as Louis D. Brandeis.

But let's cite a more recent example of the way a dictator acts. Some weeks ago Candidate Roosevelt secretly negotiated a deal with the British empire involving an exchange of destroyers and naval bases. He disregarded the Congress in such negotiations — kept it in ignorance of what was going on—actually denied to the press that such a deal was being negotiated.

We Must Wait Ten Years

On its conclusion, Candidate Roosevelt told Congress what he had done. He did not ask approval of Congress. Instead he sent Congress an opinion by his subservient attorney general, asserting all was legal. But he did not reveal all. Asked about this at a press conference, Candidate Roosevelt said the country would find out all the details about ten years from now when the State department archives regarding events this year are opened.

Is that the manner in which American presidents act? Is it the manner in which Adolph Hitler rules Germany? You answer. History shows that one of the first steps of would-be dictators is to short-circuit the legislative bodies of their countries—confront them with events when done and too late to stop them. A little later on the legislative body is not even told what has been done—and finally it is sent home as an annoyance.

That is what is in store for the American Congress if the third term movement succeeds. Our third term president will not even bother to let the people's representatives in Congress know what he does.

The Case of Elliott Roosevelt

Another example is the scandalous appointment of 30-year-old Elliott Roosevelt, the third term candidate's second son, to a captaincy in the procurement division of the army on the eve of the registration for conscription. Young Mr. Roosevelt has never seen a day of military service. He has no particular qualifications to be a captain in the army.

But because he is the president's son—and there appear to be no other reasons—he is made a swivel-chair captain while the sons of millions of every day American folks must be subjected to conscription, to a year of grueling military training at $30 a month and perhaps to service and death in a trench on some foreign battlefield.

Of course, the sons of ordinary folks in the dictator countries should not expect to be captains. They are supposed to be privates—the cannon fodder of war, singlehandedly brought about by the dictator. Positions of rank are reserved for the sons of the ruling class—for royalty. Apparently the Roosevelts already regard themselves as entitled to the prerogatives of royalty for three of the sons hold commissions. Without a day of military training, you will recall, James had himself made a lieutenant-colonel of marines several years ago. Franklin D., Jr., holds an ensign's commission in the naval reserve.

The Case of Wendell Willkie

In the World war, Wendell Willkie enlisted as a private. He spent four months intensive training before he was commissioned as a lieutenant. He spent another year in trainnig camps in this country and was then sent to France where he served under fire. Just before the armistice he was recommended for promotion to a captaincy. All of his commanders approved the recommendation but he never became a captain because when the war ended President Wilson suspended all pending promotions. But Elliott Roosevelt, without spending a day in a training camp, is appointed a captain.

Is it any wonder that the case of Elliott Roosevelt has made the blood of every World war veteran boil? Such things do not happen in a democracy. They do happen in countries ruled by men lustful for power—indispensable men who seek to perpetuate themselves in office.

The Coddling Of Elliott

From the Hampshire, W. Va., Review

In recent issues we have discussed the conscription or draft law in these columns with particular reference to its fair and impartial administration of which we thought our people could be assured. Any one not close to the situation, and but few were close to it, can not understand the pressure exerted in 1917 to obtain exemptions. Mr. Cornwell made hearty and lasting enemies of some politicians in his own party, when he ordered appeals on exemptions of their kin allowed by some local draft boards. It was the belief of President Woodrow Wilson and of General Crowder that absolute fairness and impartiality were necessary if the people were to be expected to support the government in its war efforts. Mr. Cornwell shared that belief, and picked men for the draft boards who also shared it, as a rule. He removed the draft board in one county which, inadvertently, had shaken the faith of the people in its impartiality and resisted pressure for favoritism of any kind. The result was the state made a record and the draft machinery worked without a hitch.

While the country is not at war it may be on the verge of it. Anyway hundreds of thousands of young men are to be drafted and sent to the army. The same necessity for confidence and public support of the system exists now as in 1917.

The appointment of the president's son, Elliott Roosevelt, (of draft age) as a captain in the air corps, procurement division, will not tend to strengthen public confidence in this conscription set up. Young Roosevelt is not an aviator. Nor will he be one. He will draw $200 per month as against a maximum of $30 for those who are drafted into the service. He is to "procure" something or other—supplies, perhaps, though, when inquiry was made it was said he would be a "specialist." A further inquiry as to what was meant was met with the reply: "Confidential."

When the president appointed his eldest son, "Jimmy" to a $10,000 a year job at the White House little was said. That was a political job. But now when hundreds of thousands of young men are to be drafted into army service for another of the president's sons to be safely ensconed as a captain in the air corps, procurement division — well are the American people so hypnotized by the antics of one family that they will swallow anything?

Enterprise Is Key To Newspaperdom, Edwin Hill Says

Edwin C. Hill

I remember that in my early days in the newspaper business there was a rather exquisite youth, not long out of college, who used to murmur, "What this newspaper needs is elan." I don't know whether we had elan or not, but we did go out nell-for-leather after news, and when you hit the front page with a nice little yarn all your own, you were the kid that built the pyramid, nothing less. It seems like elan, in the backward look.

We have been pondering some of these matters in connection with the celebration of Newspaper week. In newspapering, as in other crafts, old men dream dreams and young men are victims. It is quite possible that both miss certain realities by living too much in the past or the future. It's hard to make comparisons as to the comparative rating on "elan," "git-up-and-git," or whatever it was that college lad was talking about.

Bow for Bomb Dodgers

But right at the start, here's a low bow to the boys who have been ducking bombs for the last few years in Ethiopia, Spain, Poland, France, England and waypoints. They must be homesick for a nice, comfortable long war, or a soothing train wreck or the lullaby of mere nightsticks tunking recalcitrant skulls along the police beat. When it comes to big stories, they may shoot the rest of us, as did Noah when a newcomer in heaven began bragging about what he did in the Johnstown flood.

The above exploits by dare-devil lads getting news, along with the moving pictures, are making newspapering an exceedingly romantic occupation among young people. The question I hear oftenest from the youngsters is "How do I get to be a newspaperman?" I tell them the story of my friend Lawrence Perry, writer of short stories and novels, and syndicated sports writer.

A Wet Start

When he was scarcely dry behind the ears, he applied for a job at the old Evening Sun. They told him to walk up South Street and along the East river and pick up a story. Along the Lower East Side, he saw what appeared to be a battleship, moving up the river. As it neared Twenty-sixth street, its guns were belching. Young Perry had "elan." He slid down the post of a pier into a rowboat, cut it loose and pursued the ship.

There was a landing party at the Yacht Club pier, with plumed officers going ashore. Perry headed into the ceremony but "caught a crab"—that is, he mishandled his boat, half filled it with water and almost swamped it. But he stood up, yelled to the ship's officer and asked him what it was all about. The most imposing among them bade him come ashore.

On His Way

Wet and dripping, Perry landed. The impressive officer identified himself as Commodore Dewey. He explained that he had taken the new gunboat on a trial trip and this was a ceremonial welcome by the Yacht Club. But there had been all sorts of exciting adventures on the trip. The boy had a story, and six months later this same Commodore Dewey would be Admiral Dewey. Perry ran all the way to the office and was brokenhearted when they handed his story to O'Neil Sevier to write. But he was on his way as a newspaperman.

The best sample of old-time reporter enterprise, which Hollywood would love, is, of course, the classic of Ike White and how he solved the crime when the police failed. Ike was a police reporter for the Morning world. A bomb had been tossed into the office of Russell Sage, but it killed, not the financier, as intended, but the bomb-thrower himself. There was no scrap of evidence leading to the bomb-thrower's identity, until Ike White found one. He picked up a button from the man's trousers. As a pants button, it was entirely undistinguished.

On Long Trail

Ike covered every tailor shop in New York without any luck. Toward the end of his string, he found a tailer who thought they used buttons like that up in New England. He took up the trail to Boston, again visiting all the tailer shops. He found a man who said a tailor in nearby Roxbury used such buttons. In Roxbury, there was a tailor who had used such buttons on a suit made for a man named Norcross, who lived in Brookline. Norcross had been missing two weeks. His full identification was established. He was the bomb-thrower.

There, my hearties, is a slant on how you get into the newspaper business and how you stay in it. Hollywood dolls it up a lot, but I am convinced that it is still romantic, and as Booth Tarkington's old printer used to say, "a nice, loose trade."—Copyright, 1940, King Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Congress Seems Much Opposed To Plans To Adjourn

Republicans and Many Democrats against Resolution

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—Prospects for a Congressional recess grew more and more remote tonight, as House Republicans banded together to oppose any program which would deprive Congress of the power to reassemble itself in the event of an emergency.

Faced also with defections in its own ranks, the Democratic leadership was obviously reluctant to press a resolution already prepared under which a recess would be taken until Nov. 18.

Representative Martin (R-Mass) the Republican floor leader, said that a party conference, held late today, revealed a unanimous opposition to such a course. He said that if it were followed, not even the president would have authority to call the national legislature back to the capitol during the recess this, however, was disputed in democrtic circles.

In any event Martin and his Republican followers, with sizable support from the Democratic side of the chamber, were ready to back a plan under which a series of three-day recesses would be taken. This would involve brief and purely formal meetings of both houses at three-day intervals, lasting just long enough to recess for three days more.

But the Democratic leadership was against such a program. Speaker Rayburn said that an effort would be made within the next few days to determine whether there is a majority for the Nov. 18 recess, and if not, the resolution calling for it will not be called up for action.

Martin emphatically asserted that whatever is done Congress must be in a position to act if foreign developments necessitate it.

Truck Driver Killed In Highway Crash

FREDERICK, Md., Oct. 7 (AP) — A crash of two trucks, one carrying 2,000 gallons of fuel oil and the other loaded with stone, killed one man an dseriously injured another today and spread fire over a half-acre radius on route forty ten miles east of Frederick.

John E. Horner, 27, Frederick, driver of the oil truck, died a short time after being removed from the flaming wreckage, and Vernon McDonald, 35, of Lime Kiln, driver of the other truck, suffered cuts on the legs and possible internal injuries.

Firemen from Frederick and Mt. Airy worked two hours extinguishing the fire, and traffic on the main highway was blocked for two and a half hours before the wreckage was cleared.

H. L. Lucas, of near Jamsville, who reached the scene shortly after the crash, said Horner was thrown clear but was sprayed with the burning oil.

McDonald was brought to the Frederick city hospital where his condition was reported as satisfactory.

Peter Kloeckner Succumbs at Essen

BERLIN, Oct. 7 (AP)—Peter Kloeckner, 76, German industrialist and founder of the Essen Kloeckner mills, died at Essen yesterday.

Peter Kloeckner, one of the developers of the industrial Germany which arose after the Franco-Prussian war, in the hey-day of August Thyssen, Hugo Stinnes and Emil Kirdorff, was dealt a heavy blow by the World war.

All his possessions in Lorraine, including a visible supply of 81,000,000 tons of iron ore, besides ten blast furnaces, a steel plant and two rolling mills which in 1913 had produced 620,000 tons of iron and 468,000 tons of steel, were lost to France.

He was fifty-six then, but rebuilt his fortune, allying himself with the potash trust, which produced artificial fertilizer. Later he acquired several steel and coal concerns, welding them into the Kloeckner Werke, Berlin, with a share capital of 105,000,000 marks.

He was little heard of outside Germany after Adolf Hitler came to power.

British To Open The Burma Road

LONDON, Oct. 8 (Tuesday) (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill is preparing to announce "within the next few days" a British decision to reopen the Burma Road to China, it was reported reliably early today.

The report said the United States would be consulted and Soviet Russia would be kept informed.

Britain agreed under Japanese pressure to close the road on July 17 for three months with the understanding that Japan would work during that period for a peace ending Japan's three-year old war against China.

Since Japan joined the German-Italian Axis ten days ago, it has been expected that on Oct. 17, end of the three-month period, Britain would reopen the road, most important supply route for free China.

Unofficial Chinese and British sources in Chungking, the provisional Chinese capital, said Sunday they were confident the road would be reopened and would be used even more effectively than in the past, despite the enhanced possibility of bombing by planes from the new Japanese bases in French Indo-China.

At the time the road was closed, it was said that it would be of little use during the three months because of the rainy season.

Methodists To Observe Building First Church

CHESTERTOWN, Md., Oct. 7 (AP)—A celebration commemorating as an historical event the building of the first Methodist church on the eastern shore will be held October 13, it was announced today by the peninsula conference historical society.

The celebration will be at 2:30 p. m. on the original site of the old Kent meeting house, on the post road from Chestertown to Rock Hall.

The old Kent meeting house is not actually the oldest Methodist church on the shore, society members said, for two others were built as church of England buildings. One was confiscated during the revolutionary war and the other was presented to the Methodists by the rector.

But the Kent church was the first ever erected by the Methodists on the peninsula. It also was the first they ever owned, the others having come into their possession in 1778 and 1779.

Grounds of the Kent meeting house, neglected for eighty years, have been cleared and beautified under the society's supervision. Much of the work was done through the efforts of Frank and Ivanhoe Willis.

Bridges Sees Plot To Scuttle CIO

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Oct. 7 (AP)—Harry Bridges told the California state CIO convention here that certain measures being taken to check subversive activities really were intended to "scuttle the CIO."

"Ostensibly, these moves are being made to check subversive activities, but they really are trying to scuttle the CIO," the California CIO director said.

"If they are written into law the unions will fold or be on a par with company unions."

He expressed his opinion that attempts are being made now to threaten civil liberties and to render unions ineffective. He listed wire tapping, "secret police" and a trend toward "illegal search" as activities he considered objectionable.

Congress Seems Much Opposed To Plans To Adjourn

Republicans and Many Democrats against Resolution

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—Prospects for a Congressional recess grew more and more remote tonight, as House Republicans banded together to oppose any program which would deprive Congress of the power to reassemble itself in the event of an emergency.

Faced also with defections in its own ranks, the Democratic leadership was obviously reluctant to press a resolution already prepared under which a recess would be taken until Nov. 18.

Representative Martin (R-Mass) the Republican floor leader, said that a party conference, held late today, revealed a unanimous opposition to such a course. He said that if it were followed, not even the president would have authority to call the national legislature back to the capitol during the recess. This, however, was disputed in democratic circles.

In any event Martin and his Republican followers, with sizable support from the Democratic side of the chamber, were ready to back a plan under which a series of three-day recesses would be taken. This would involve brief and purely formal meetings of both houses at three-day intervals, lasting just long enough to recess for three days more.

But the Democratic leadership was against such a program. Speaker Rayburn said that an effort would be made within the next few days to determine whether there is a majority for the Nov. 18 recess, and if not, the resolution calling for it will not be called up for action.

Martin emphatically asserted that whatever is done Congress must be in a position to act if foreign developments necessitate it.

Truck Driver Killed In Highway Crash

FREDERICK, Md., Oct. 7 (AP) — A crash of two trucks, one carrying 8,000 gallons of fuel oil and the other loaded with stone, killed one man an dseriously injured another today and spread fire over a half-acre radius on route forty ten miles east of Frederick.

John E. Horner, 27, Frederick, driver of the oil truck, died a short time after being removed from the burning wreckage, and Vernon McDonald, 35, of Lime Kiln, driver of the other truck, suffered cuts on the face and possible internal injuries.

Firemen from Frederick and Mt. Airy worked two hours extinguishing the fire, and traffic on the main highway was blocked for two and a half hours before the wreckage was cleared.

H. L. Lucas, of near Jamsville, who reached the scene shortly after the crash, said Horner was thrown clear but was sprayed with the burning oil.

McDonald was brought to the Frederick city hospital where his condition was reported as satisfactory.

Peter Kloeckner Succumbs at Essen

BERLIN, Oct. 7 (AP)—Peter Kloeckner, 76, German industrialist and founder of the Essen Kloeckner mills, died at Essen yesterday.

Peter Kloeckner, one of the developers of the industrial Germany which arose after the Franco-Prussian war, in the hey-day of August Thyssen, Hugo Stinnes and Emil Kirdorff, was dealt a heavy blow by the World war.

All his possessions in Lorraine, including a visible supply of 81,000,000 tons of iron ore, besides ten blast furnaces, a steel plant and two rolling mills which in 1913 had produced 620,000 tons of iron and 468,000 tons of steel, were lost to France.

He was fifty-six then, but rebuilt his fortune, allying himself with the potash trust, which produced artificial fertilizer. Later he acquired several steel and coal concerns, welding them into the Kloeckner Werke, Berlin, with a share capital of 105,000,000 marks.

He was little heard of outside Germany after Adolf Hitler came to power.

British To Open The Burma Road

LONDON, Oct. 8 (Tuesday) (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill is preparing to announce "within the next few days" a British decision to reopen the Burma Road to China, it was reported reliably early today.

The report said the United States would be consulted and Soviet Russia would be kept informed.

Britain agreed under Japanese pressure to close the road on July 17 for three months with the understanding that Japan would work during that period for a peace ending Japan's three-year old war against China.

Since Japan joined the German-Italian Axis ten days ago, it has been expected that on Oct. 17, end of the three-month period, Britain would reopen the road, most important supply route for free China.

Unofficial Chinese and British sources in Chungking, the provisional Chinese capital, said Sunday they were confident the road would be reopened and would be used even more effectively than in the past, despite the enhanced possibility of bombing by planes from the new Japanese bases in French Indo-China.

At the time the road was closed, it was said that it would be of little use during the three months because of the rainy season.

Methodists To Observe Building First Church

CHESTERTOWN, Md., Oct. 7 (AP)—A celebration commemorating as an historical event the building of the first Methodist church on the eastern shore will be held October 13, it was announced today by the peninsula conference historical society.

The celebration will be at 2:30 p. m. on the original site of the old Kent meeting house, on the post road from Chestertown to Rock Hall.

The old Kent meeting house is not actually the oldest Methodist church on the shore, society members said, for two others were built as church of England buildings. One was confiscated during the revolutionary war and the other was presented to the Methodists by the rector.

But the Kent church was the first ever erected by the Methodists on the peninsula. It also was the first they ever owned, the others having come into their possession in 1778 and 1779.

Grounds of the Kent meeting house, neglected for eighty years, have been cleared and beautified under the society's supervision. Much of the work was done through the efforts of Frank and Ivanhoe Willis.

Bridges Sees Plot To Scuttle CIO

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Oct. 7 (AP)—Harry Bridges told the California state CIO convention here that certain measures being taken to check subversive activities really were intended to "scuttle the CIO."

"Ostensibly, these moves are being made to check subversive activities, but they really are trying to scuttle the CIO," the California CIO director said.

"If they are written into law the unions will fold or be on a par with company unions."

He expressed his opinion that attempts are being made now to threaten civil liberties and to render unions ineffective. He listed wire tapping, "secret police" and a trend toward "illegal search" as activities he considered objectionable.

Midget Fire Engines Help Save London

LONDON, Oct. 7 (AP)—Two thousand midget fire engines are helping to save London from ruin by fire.

At almost any fire these days, the snub-nosed gray little machines may be seen pouring out water as efficiently as their giant prototypes.

Ordered shortly before the war started, the auxiliaries can "turn on a ha'penny," a feature considered absolutely necessary for the dimensions of many London streets.

They pump 500 to 750 gallons of water per minute. The best the big ones do is 1,000 gallons.

Douglas Bomber On Way to Canada

DETROIT, Oct. 7 (AP)—A silver, two-motored Douglas bomber, camouflaged with daubs of brown, green and gray paint, landed at the city airport here enroute to Canadian army use and was placed under guard in a locked hangar. The bomber, first of the Douglas planes ordered for Canada, was expected to leave tomorrow for an unannounced destination across the border. Other Douglas planes are expected to follow soon.

Need Not Embarrass
Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wabbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH at any drug store.—Advertisement.

CHAPTER FORTY

THE PROGRAM, as laid down by Gun, was carried out to the letter. They went into the bungalow, laughing, gay and inconsequential. Gun dispensed drinks, and then, after a little while, he remarked:

"Do you know, I've got an idea that I'm not really necessary to this party? And I hate playing extra gentleman in any show—so I'm off to bed. Besides, I'm still finding the sensation of lying in sheets a novelty, and I rather like it."

"Then get to them, old boy!" Tommy roared, in his heartiest voice. "Don't let us keep you. We can amuse ourselves, eh, Coral?"

And her voice was all lazy seduction as she replied:

"We can try, Tommy, I think!"

Gun bade them a laughing good night, and went noisily up the stairs, and went noisily on in the bedroom, and undressed in full view of the window. He was leaving nothing to chance.

The next hour and a half was a trying one for him. There was no sound to be heard, except the low murmur of the others' voices from below, and an occasional interpolation as the guards spoke to each other. Gun, lying in bed, tried to think of every possible eventuality that might occur to mar their plans and prevent their escape, and some method of countering it. He found that, unfortunately, most of these eventualities were only too likely to happen, and that if they did they could not be coped with.

Time passed. He heard Coral and Tommy murmuring affectionate good nights. No doubt the listeners at the other end heard too, and for the first time since he had gone upstairs Gun grinned at the thought of Otto's annoyance.

Then he heard Coral leave—heard her laughing with the guard on the gate. Gun grinned again. It was another case of "establishing confidence."

Tommy came upstairs, and Gun made a warning sign to him and then started on a little more play acting.

"You've been a hell of a long time, haven't you, Tommy?"

Tommy rose to it well.

"What if I have? We're not short for time, cooped up in this hole, are we?"

"You're falling for that girl, aren't you?"

"Suppose I am? Isn't she worth it?"

Gun's voice sounded very serious as he said:

"Look here, you're not letting her wheedle anything out of you, are you?"

"Don't be a bloody fool, Gunston—and don't be offensive, either. I don't like it."

"Sorry! I didn't mean to be offensive. But you mustn't forget she's on the other side, you know."

Tommy gave a conceited laugh, as he dropped his shoes on the floor.

"I don't think she's altogether on the other side so far as I'm concerned, my boy."

Gun appeared to lose patience.

"Oh, gosh! You drunken . . . So-and-so, I'm going to sleep. Good night."

"Good night—and be damned to you!" Tommy laughed.

He finished undressing, put out the light, and then tip-toed across and whispered, with his mouth close to Gun's ear: "What do we do now?" And Gun answered, in the same tone:

"Get dressed again—in the dark. And no noise!"

The next two hours represented a period that Gun hoped he would never have to go through again. He and Tommy sat on their beds, unable to talk, except for an occasional word in the faintest of whispers. They strained their ears to catch any sound that might tell them what was going on beyond the wooden fence. And all the time they knew that almost any sort of sound would spell disaster to their hopes.

Vicariously Gun went through all sorts of agonies. He saw Coral discovered on her way to Trent's room; he saw her hand, sliding stealthily under Trent's pillow, suddenly gripped by the latter's hand—and he saw her lying, limp and white, on the floor, with a little round hole just in the center of her forehead.

Minutes were hours, and hours were ages.

After a long time Tommy tip-toed over, and sat on the bed beside him—but all things pass in time. After they had been sitting there for what seemed centuries, Tommy gave a sharp hiss, and suddenly gripped Gun's arm.

Quite clearly voices came to their ears—and one of the voices was Coral's. She was probably speaking in little above a whisper, but it seemed almost as though she was shouting. Then she laughed, and Tommy hissed:

"Good God! What's she screaming like that for? She'll wake up the whole damned show!

"Come on downstairs!" Gun whispered. "Carry your shoes."

They crept down, and put on their shoes in the lower room. Gun had a dark blue handkerchief, and he wrapped it around the electric light bulb and then switched it on. They could just see by the light.

There came a sound at the door, and then it opened and Coral came in. She looked pale, and was breathing rather hard.

"Are you there? Oh, good. I've got the key of the arsenal, and Trent's sleeping like a bell. Everything seems quiet. I've given the guard a doped flask, and he's promised to share it with the others."

She spoke in short staccato sentences, as though she was out of breath. Gun murmured:

"You've done spendidly! Now, we've got to wait until the dope takes effect—or nearly. Then you must slip out, Carol, and get the key when he goes off to sleep."

"Ye gods!" Tommy murmured. "More of it? Hell. I'll be a nervous wreck before it's time to really do anything."

He need not have worried!

From the gate there suddenly came the sound of voices, and then footsteps, heavy and undisguised, running along the path toward the door. Coral caught her breath sharply! Gun, from some instinct he hardly realized, moved across to the wall, so that he was out of the line of vision from the door. Then he started to creep stealthily towards it.

A moment later the door was flung violently open, and, in the faint blue light, they saw the grim figure of Otto framed in it. His face was twisted with fury, and he held an automatic in his hand.

For a moment he stood there, glaring at Coral and Tommy. They were standing together, staring back at him dumbly.

At last he spoke:

"So?" he said, in a low, guttural voice. "And what is this accursed double-crossing, eh? Well, no matter—this is where it ends."

He raised the pistol slowly, the muzzle covering Tommy, who never moved. Coral suddenly began to fumble—she was trying to get Gun's automatic into action.

But there was no need. Otto had not seen Gun, nor had he looked for him, no doubt supposing merely a clandestine love meeting between Coral and Tommy. And now Gun gathered himself together, and leaped like a cat.

Like a cat he leaped—like a cat he pounced.

He landed neatly right on the totally unprepared Otto, and gripped him with his knees as a horseman grips his mount. Simultaneously his right hand closed on Otto's pistol wrist, and his left gripped his throat, compelling silence. Under the force of the impact, Otto staggered heavily against the wall, and then collapsed, sliding against it to the ground—with Gun on top.

A choking gurgle came from the compressed throat—an attempt to shout caused Gun to tighten his grip at the same moment as he wrenched the automatic away. Otto heaved and writhed like a thrown heifer. Gun kept his grip on the throat, peered down at his adversary to get just the right aim, then swung the pistol by the muzzle and brought it down heavily on the other's head.

Otto choked and grunted, and then lay still.

"Good work, boy!" chuckled Tommy, as Gun got onto his feet.

But Gun was not looking for applause.

"This is where we get very, very busy," he gritted, from behind his teeth. "Or we'll have the whole gang swarming like bees."

He picked up the hat that Otto had been wearing. It was green, and had a distinctive shape.

"Tommy, take that handkerchief off," he directed, and added, with a sudden grin: "Reversal of the usual process—house lights up, and the show begins."

He turned to Coral.

"I'm going to be Otto for a minute or two. You go down the path in front of me, and hurry. The guard will take me for Otto—I hope. The moment he opens the gate, go right through—and leave the rest to me."

Tommy had taken off the handkerchief, and the room was flooded with light. A moment later the guard at the gate, who was interested, saw Coral hurry from the house followed by one who, silhouetted against the bright light, he took to be Otto. After that, his eyes were on Coral.

He unlocked the gate as she hurried toward it, with the man close to her heels. Coral went right through, and as the man he took to be Otto came to him he was surprised to see him raise his right hand as though in salute—an unusual courtesy from the sullen Otto.

On that feeling of surprise he faded out, for Gun brought the pistol down on his head with scientific precision, and he slumped soundless to the ground.

Gun bent over him and secured his short rifle and bandolier. Tommy was standing in the lighted doorway, staring into the darkness. There were clouds over the faint moon at the moment, for which Gun thanked the gods. He also prayed that Tommy would have savvy enough to stop where he was for a few moments—it would tend to allay any suspicions the sentry might have.

"Go and have a word with the other guard," Gun whispered to Coral. "Hold his attention just for a moment or two."

Coral turned and walked toward the angle of the wire fence—and as she went she paused to light a cigaret. Gun feverently blessed both her wit and her nerve, as he turned outward and made a detour through the shadows.

Out of the darkness the butt of the rifle that was now Gun's connected with his occiput, and he also fell and lay still.

Gun chuckled and whispered:

"It's beginning to look like the stage during a performance of Hamlet! Now go around and meet the other one, at the back."

Coral made a face.

"I don't like this at all. It's—it's thuggish, somehow. And these boys have been nice to me."

"It's been said before," retorted Gun, "that necessity is the mother of more children than invention. Get to it—time counts."

He melted into the shadow once more.

In the doorway Tommy, peering and straining his ears, suddenly realized what an excellent mark he made. He side-stepped, and then walked through the darkness toward the gate, where the form of the first guard lay—very still.

Coral hurried around to the other side of the fence, and called in a low voice:

"Slim—just a moment, will you?"

A nasal voice answered:

"Coming, Miss."

They met a yard or so farther along.

"Say, Miss Coral, what's the trouble? It anything wrong?"

"Well, I don't know, Slim, but I wish you'd just—"

At that moment a shadow materialized behind the lanky form of Slim, and once more the rifle butt did its work. Slim went down like a pole-axed bullock, with no more than a grunt. And, as though waiting for the signal, the faint moon came out from behind the clouds.

CHAPTER FORTY

THE PROGRAM, as laid down by Gun, was carried out to the letter. They went into the bungalow, laughing, gay and inconsequential. Gun dispensed drinks, and then, after a little while, he remarked:

"Do you know, I've got an idea that I'm not really necessary to this party? And I hate playing extra gentleman in any show—so I'm off to bed. Besides, I'm still finding the sensation of lying in sheets a novelty, and I rather like it."

"Then get to them, old boy!" Tommy roared, in his heartiest voice. "Don't let us keep you. We can amuse ourselves, eh, Coral?"

And her voice was all lazy seduction as she replied:

"We can try, Tommy, I think!"

Gun bade them a laughing good night, and went noisily up the stairs, and went noisily on in the bedroom, and undressed in full view of the window. He was leaving nothing to chance.

The next hour and a half was a trying one for him. There was no sound to be heard, except the low murmur of the others' voices from below, and an occasional interpolation as the guards spoke to each other. Gun, lying in bed, tried to think of every possible eventuality that might occur to mar their plans and prevent their escape, and some method of countering it. He found that, unfortunately, most of these eventualities were only too likely to happen, and that if they did they could not be coped with.

Time passed. He heard Coral and Tommy murmuring affectionate good nights. No doubt the listeners at the other end heard too, and for the first time since he had gone upstairs Gun grinned at the thought of Otto's annoyance.

Then he heard Coral leave—heard her laughing with the guard on the gate. Gun grinned again. It was another case of "establishing confidence."

Tommy came upstairs, and Gun made a warning sign to him and then started on a little more play acting.

"You've been a hell of a long time, haven't you, Tommy?"

Tommy rose to it well.

"What if I have? We're not short for time, cooped up in this hole, are we?"

"You're falling for that girl, aren't you?"

"Suppose I am? Isn't she worth it?"

Gun's voice sounded very serious as he said:

"Look here, you're not letting her wheedle anything out of you, are you?"

"Don't be a bloody fool, Gunston—and don't be offensive, either. I don't like it."

"Sorry! I didn't mean to be offensive. But you mustn't forget she's on the other side, you know."

Tommy gave a conceited laugh, as he dropped his shoes on the floor.

"I don't think she's altogether on the other side so far as I'm concerned, my boy."

Gun appeared to lose patience.

"Oh, gosh! You drunken . . . So-and-so, I'm going to sleep. Good night."

"Good night—and be damned to you!" Tommy laughed.

He finished undressing, put out the light, and then tip-toed across and whispered, with his mouth close to Gun's ear: "What do we do now?" And Gun answered, in the same tone:

"Get dressed again—in the dark. And no noise!"

The next two hours represented a period that Gun hoped he would never have to go through again. He and Tommy sat on their beds, unable to talk, except for an occasional word in the faintest of whispers. They strained their ears to catch any sound that might tell them what was going on beyond the wooden fence. And all the time they knew that almost any sort of sound would spell disaster to their hopes.

Vicariously Gun went through all sorts of agonies. He saw Coral discovered on her way to Trent's room; he saw her hand, sliding stealthily under Trent's pillow, suddenly gripped by the latter's hand—and he saw her lying, limp and white, on the floor, with a little round hole just in the center of her forehead.

Minutes were hours, and hours were ages.

After a long time Tommy tip-toed over, and sat on the bed beside him—but all things pass in time. After they had been sitting there for what seemed centuries, Tommy gave a sharp hiss, and suddenly gripped Gun's arm.

Quite clearly voices came to their ears—and one of the voices was Coral's. She was probably speaking in little above a whisper, but it seemed almost as though she was shouting. Then she laughed, and Tommy hissed:

"Good God! What's she screaming like that for? She'll wake up the whole damned show!

"Come on downstairs!" Gun whispered. "Carry your shoes."

They crept down, and put on their shoes in the lower room. Gun had a dark blue handkerchief, and he wrapped it around the electric light bulb and then switched it on. They could just see by the light.

There came a sound at the door, and then it opened and Coral came in. She looked pale, and was breathing rather hard.

"Are you there? Oh, good. I've got the key of the arsenal, and Trent's sleeping like a bell. Everything seems quiet. I've given the guard a doped flask, and he's promised to share it with the others."

She spoke in short staccato sentences, as though she was out of breath. Gun murmured:

"You've done spendidly! Now, we've got to wait until the dope takes effect—or nearly. Then you must slip out, Carol, and get the key when he goes off to sleep."

"Ye gods!" Tommy murmured. "More of it? Hell, I'll be a nervous wreck before it's time to really do anything."

He need not have worried!

From the gate there suddenly came the sound of voices, and then footsteps, heavy and undisguised, running along the path toward the door. Coral caught her breath sharply! Gun, from some instinct he hardly realized, moved across to the wall, so that he was out of the line of vision from the door. Then he started to creep stealthily towards it.

A moment later the door was flung violently open, and, in the faint blue light, they saw the grim figure of Otto framed in it. His face was twisted with fury, and he held an automatic in his hand.

For a moment he stood there, glaring at Coral and Tommy. They were standing together, staring back at him dumbly.

At last he spoke:

"So?" he said, in a low, guttural voice. "And what is this accursed double-crossing, eh? Well, no matter—this is where it ends."

He raised the pistol slowly, the muzzle covering Tommy, who never moved. Coral suddenly began to fumble—she was trying to get Gun's automatic into action.

But there was no need. Otto had not seen Gun, nor had he looked for him, no doubt supposing merely a clandestine love meeting between Coral and Tommy. And now Gun gathered himself together, and leaped like a cat.

Like a cat he leaped—like a cat he pounced.

He landed neatly right on the totally unprepared Otto, and gripped him with his knees as a horseman grips his mount. Simultaneously his right hand closed on Otto's pistol wrist, and his left gripped his throat, compelling silence. Under the force of the impact, Otto staggered heavily against the wall, and then collapsed, sliding against it to the ground—with Gun on top.

A choking gurgle came from the compressed throat—an attempt to shout caused Gun to tighten his grip at the same moment as he wrenched the automatic away. Otto heaved and writhed like a thrown heifer. Gun kept his grip on the throat, peered down at his adversary to get just the right aim, then swung the pistol by the muzzle and brought it down heavily on the other's head.

Otto choked and grunted, and then lay still.

"Good work, boy!" chuckled Tommy, as Gun got onto his feet.

But Gun was not looking for applause.

"This is where we get very, very busy," he gritted, from behind his teeth. "Or we'll have the whole gang swarming like bees."

He picked up the hat that Otto had been wearing. It was green, and had a distinctive shape.

"Tommy, take that handkerchief off," he directed, and added, with a sudden grin: "Reversa' of the usual process—house lights up, and the show begins."

He turned to Coral.

"I'm going to be Otto for a minute or two. You go down the path in front of me, and hurry. The guard will take me for Otto—I hope. The moment he opens the gate, go right through—and leave the rest to me."

Tommy had taken off the handkerchief, and the room was flooded with light. A moment later the guard at the gate, who was interested, saw Coral hurry from the house followed by one who, silhouetted against the bright light, he took to be Otto. After that, his eyes were on Coral.

He unlocked the gate as she hurried toward it, with the man close to her heels. Coral went right through, and as the man he took to be Otto came to him he was surprised to see him raise his right hand as though in salute—an unusual courtesy from the sullen Otto.

On that feeling of surprise he faded out, for Gun brought the pistol down on his head with scientific precision, and he slumped soundless to the ground.

Gun bent over him and secured his short rifle and bandolier. Tommy was standing in the lighted doorway, staring into the darkness. There were clouds over the faint moon at the moment, for which Gun thanked the gods. He also prayed that Tommy would have savvy enough to stop where he was for a few moments—it would tend to allay any suspicions the sentry might have.

"Go and have a word with the other guard," Gun whispered to Coral. "Hold his attention just for a moment or two."

Coral turned and walked toward the angle of the wire fence—and as she went she paused to light a cigaret. Gun feverently blessed both her wit and her nerve, as he turned outward and made a detour through the shadows.

Out of the darkness the butt of the rifle that was now Gun's connected with his occiput, and he also fell and lay still.

Gun chuckled and whispered:

"It's beginning to look like the stage during a performance of Hamlet! Now go around and meet the other one, at the back."

Coral made a face.

"I don't like this at all. It's—it's thuggish, somehow. And these boys have been nice to me."

"It's been said before," retorted Gun, "that necessity is the mother of more children than invention. Get to it—time counts."

He melted into the shadow once more.

In the doorway Tommy, peering and straining his ears, suddenly realized what an excellent mark he made. He side-stepped, and then walked through the darkness toward the gate, where the form of the first guard lay—very still.

Coral hurried around to the other side of the fence, and called in a low voice:

"Slim—just a moment, will you?"

A nasal voice answered:

"Coming, Miss."

They met a yard or so farther along.

"Say, Miss Coral, what's the trouble? It anything wrong?"

"Well, I don't know, Slim, but I wish you'd just—"

At that moment a shadow materialized behind the lanky form of Slim, and once more the rifle butt did its work. Slim went down like a pole-axed bullock, with no more than a grunt. And, as though waiting for the signal, the faint moon came out from behind the clouds.

Prisoner Keeps Sheriff on Edge

ST. CHARLES, Mo., Oct. 7 (AP)—For five days Sheriff Joseph Borgmeyer has been housing a prisoner whom he wishes could make bond and leave.

During this time the unruly inmate has set a padded cell afire, broken a water pipe partly flooding the county jail, Houdinied out of a strait-jacket and staged a hunger strike.

The prisoner is not a husky man as you might suspect—but a comely 24-year-old woman arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated.

Growing Child's Awkwardness Is Not Unnatural

Parents Should Not Scold Children for Dropping Things

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

During a form I was conducting in a Milwaukee school assembly a very tall eighth-grade boy rose and said: "It seem I'm always dropping and breaking things. My mother and father scold me and tell me I don't care. I do care. I try hard and get discouraged. Is there any hope for me to get better?"

"You see," I replied, "your father and mother want to help you get over this awkwardness and they are worried about the cost of the things you break. They suppose they will help you by their methods. You and I don't believe they will. If I could talk to your parents I think I could help them see that when a boy grows fast as you do, at your age, he is very awkward. By and by he gets better control of himself. You will, I am sure. If I were you I would make myself move slowly when handling things easily dropped and broken. At some quiet time when you feel calm and your father and mother seem most kindly, I would sit down by them and say: 'Mother and Dad, I'm sorry I'm so awkward. I'm sorry I drop and break so many things. I do try hard to be careful. Please don't you be patient with me?'"

Awkward Children

It is in early adolescence when extreme awkwardness is most common. Awkwardness may, however, appear at any age. The other day a mother told me of a child of eight "always dropping and spilling things." Teachers complain of some children in the lower grades who are "so messy with everything." Usually their penmanship is atrocious. As a rule, they are very fidgety, hardly able to sit still. Perhaps they chew their nails, even their clothing. Obviously such children are nervous and excitable.

A Texas mother writes:

"I should like you to tell me what I should do about my five-year-old son's careless awkwardness. He spills everything he gets his hands on, stumbles over everything, and is in general quite a trial. He has always been this way—walks over anything on the floor without even glancing around to see what it is or even putting anything up and out of the way. He can't carry a cup half full of water across the floor without watching it. The minute he takes his eyes off it it turns up and spills."

I entreated this mother to seek the advice of a physician about her child and to work with this doctor to build him up physically and cultivate in him more calmness and poise.

"Treat him as a sick child," I wrote her. "Get him out of doors for short periods of play but not exciting play, and don't let him get over-tired. Have him lie down every afternoon for an hour. Also have him lie down for 15 minutes right before lunch and dinner. Give him tools and encourage him to draw, color, cut, paste and build.

"Keep your voice soft and low. Try to create a serene family atmosphere. Try to win his cooperation. Please don't scold him for his 'apparent carelessness.' He is not careless, he is sick. Praise him when he shows calm and carefulness. You and Dad should show this lad more affection. Put your arm about him now and then and don't hesitate to hold him on your knees or rock him or even to kiss and cuddle him.

Show Affection

"In your letter you refer to a baby one year old. This older child's nervous disorder might be traceable wholly or in part to jealousy of the baby. Certainly you can do no harm by striving to make this lad feel more secure and worth while as a member of the family group. Anyway, don't look for miracles. Don't expect the lad to change all at once. Be happy if you see gradual improvement after a few months or weeks."

40 Hour Work Week To Start Oct. 23

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—The Wage-Hour administration now says that any work week starting before midnight Oct. 23 would continue for forty-two hours without payment of overtime.

Under the wage-hour law, the maximum work week without overtime pay is to be reduced from forty-two to forty hours after Oct. 23.

Col. Philip Fleming, wage-hour administrator, said he interpreted the law to mean the new restriction applied to "the first full work week beginning after midnight, Oct. 23."

Under this construction, he explained, the restriction would not apply to a work week beginning Monday, Oct. 21.

The present minimum pay of thirty cents an hour will remain unchanged when the hours maximum is reduced.

"The Authority on Authorities"

CONSERVE YOUR ASSETS

WHEN a declarer possesses a finessing position against a king, with the ace, queen, jack and ten in his holdings, he can usually afford to lead one of those honors toward the ace. But if he lacks the ten, he is usually better off in leading a small one, which sometimes will have the effect of conserving his assets.

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠

When the dummy went down, it looked very much to South as if he was in too high a contract, especially after the defenders ripped off their book with three tricks in diamonds. He had to win three finesses to make his contract, but it could have been done by proper play.

After the third diamond, East led the club 4 and the Q won the first finesse. Next the heart J was led. West covered and the A won. That lead of the J was sound because the declarer also had the Q and 10 on his side. But his foot slipped into unsoundness when he then led the spade J from the dummy. The K, of course, went on, forcing the A. When the Q was then played and East showed out, South knew he had beaten himself. The 10 was now set up for West, who set the contract with it.

Had South not reckoned that "it made no difference" whether or not he led the J or a little one to the Q, he would have succeeded in making his contract.

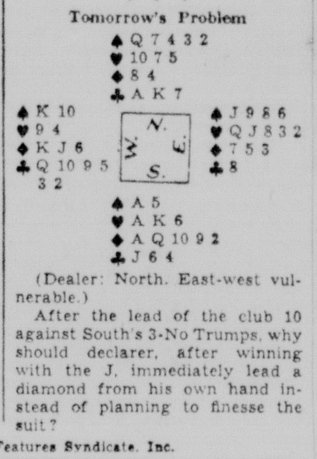
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: North. East-west vulnerable.)

After the lead of the club 10 against South's 3-No Trumps, why should declarer, after winning with the J, immediately lead a diamond from his own hand instead of planning to finesse the suit?

Frenchmen Forming Committees To Work Under Gen. De Galle

LONDON, Oct. 7 (AP)—The headquarters of Gen. Charles De Gaulle, leader of the French forces still fighting with Britain, announced today national committees of Frenchmen have been formed in the United States and nine other countries to act in close cooperation with the free French forces.

The announcement added that in twenty-nine other countries where Frenchmen have offered their services, Gen. De Gaulle has appointed representatives who are forming committees.

The nine countries in addition to the United States and Britain are Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, Chile, Mexico, Canada, Egypt, South Africa, and Australia, as well as the British colony of Mauritius, about 500 miles east of Madagascar.

Cure for Alcoholism Discovered by Doctor

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 7 (AP)—The Arkansas Gazette reported today that a Little Rock physician had "applied to a limited but successful extent" a cure for alcoholism based "on the principle of developing a 'sensitivity' to alcohol." The physician was not identified.

"The new treatment was compared with the experience of suffering sickness from a food or drink," the Gazette said. "After a person has become ill from eating a certain food, whether from overeating, poor preparation of the food, poor condition of the eater's physical system at the time, he may develop a dislike for the food.

"Such a dislike was described as a 'sensitivity.' Development of such a sensitivity toward alcohol was said to be difficult. The Little Rock physician used a 'refined agent,' which is injected into the tissues like typhoid vaccine or hay fever shots.

"After receiving the injection, patients reportedly lost their craving for alcohol. x x x The basic principle of the treatment was said to be nothing new and to have wide application in medical science."

Prisoner Keeps Sheriff on Edge

ST. CHARLES, Mo., Oct. 7 (AP)—For five days Sheriff Joseph Borgmeyer has been housing a prisoner whom he wishes could make bond and leave.

During this time the unruly inmate has set a padded cell afire, broken a water pipe partly flooding the county jail, Houdinied out of a strait-jacket and staged a hunger strike.

The prisoner is not a husky man as you might suspect—but a comely 24-year-old woman arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated.

Growing Child's Awkwardness Is Not Unnatural

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

During a form I was conducting in a Milwaukee school assembly a very tall eighth-grade boy rose and said: "It seem I'm always dropping and breaking things. My mother and father scold me and tell me I don't care. I do care. I try hard and get discouraged. Is there any hope for me to get better?"

"You see," I replied, "your father and mother want to help you get over this awkwardness and they are worried about the cost of the things you break. They suppose they will help you by their methods. You and I don't believe they will. If I could talk to your parents I think I could help them see that when a boy grows fast as you do, at your age, he is very awkward. By and by he gets better control of himself. You will, I am sure. If I were you I would make myself move slowly when handling things easily dropped and broken. At some quiet time when you feel calm and your father and mother seem most kindly, I would sit down by them and say: 'Mother and Dad, I'm sorry I'm so awkward. I'm sorry I drop and break so many things. I do try hard to be careful. Please don't you be patient with me?'"

Awkward Children

It is in early adolescence when extreme awkwardness is most common. Awkwardness may, however, appear at any age. The other day a mother told me of a child of eight "always dropping and spilling things." Teachers complain of some children in the lower grades who are "so messy with everything." Usually their penmanship is atrocious. As a rule, they are very fidgety, hardly able to sit still. Perhaps they chew their nails, even their clothing. Obviously such children are nervous and excitable.

A Texas mother writes:

"I should like you to tell me what I should do about my five-year-old son's careless awkwardness. He spills everything he gets his hands on, stumbles over everything, and is in general quite a trial. He has always been this way—walks over anything on the floor without even glancing around to see what it is or even putting anything up and out of the way. He can't carry a cup half full of water across the floor without watching it. The minute he takes his eyes off it it turns up and spills."

I entreated this mother to seek the advice of a physician about her child and to work with this doctor to build him up physically and cultivate in him more calmness and poise.

"Treat him as a sick child," I wrote her. "Get him out of doors for short periods of play but not exciting play, and don't let him get over-tired. Have him lie down every afternoon for an hour. Also have him lie down for 15 minutes right before lunch and dinner. Give him tools and encourage him to draw, color, cut, paste and build.

"Keep your voice soft and low. Try to create a serene family atmosphere. Try to win his cooperation. Please don't scold him for his 'apparent carelessness.' He is not careless, he is sick. Praise him when he shows calm and carefulness. You and Dad should show this lad more affection. Put your arm about him now and then and don't hesitate to hold him on your knees or rock him or even to kiss and cuddle him.

Show Affection

"In your letter you refer to a baby one year old. This older child's nervous disorder might be traceable wholly or in part to jealousy of the baby. Certainly you can do no harm by striving to make this lad feel more secure and worth while as a member of the family group. Anyway, don't look for miracles. Don't expect the lad to change all at once. Be happy if you see gradual improvement after a few months or weeks."

40 Hour Work Week To Start Oct. 23

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—The Wage-Hour administration now says that any work week starting before midnight Oct. 23 would continue for forty-two hours without payment of overtime.

Under the wage-hour law, the maximum work week without overtime pay is to be reduced from forty-two to forty hours after Oct. 23.

Col. Philip Fleming, wage-hour administrator, said he interpreted the law to mean the new restriction applied to "the first full work week beginning after midnight, Oct. 23."

Under this construction, he explained, the restriction would not apply to a work week beginning Monday, Oct. 21.

The present minimum pay of thirty cents an hour will remain unchanged when the hours maximum is reduced.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

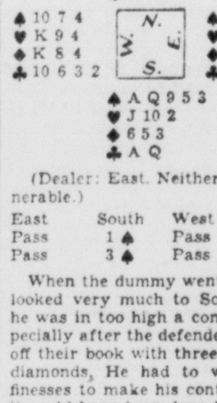
CONSERVE YOUR ASSETS

WHEN a declarer possesses a finessing position against a king, with the ace, queen, jack and ten in his holdings, he can usually afford to lead one of those honors toward the ace. But if he lacks the ten, he is usually better off in leading a small one, which sometimes will have the effect of conserving his assets.



(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠

When the dummy went down, it looked very much to South as if he was in too high a contract, especially after the defenders ripped off their book with three tricks in diamonds. He had to win three finesses to make his contract, but it could have been done by proper play.

After the third diamond, East led the club 4 and the Q won the first finesse. Next the heart J was led. West covered and the A won. That lead of the J was sound because the declarer also had the Q and 10 on his side. But his foot slipped into unsoundness when he then led the spade J from the dummy. The K, of course, went on, forcing the A. When the Q was then played and East showed out, South knew he had beaten himself. The 10 was now set up for West, who set the contract with it.

Had South not reckoned that "it made no difference" whether or not he led the J or a little one to the Q, he would have succeeded in making his contract.

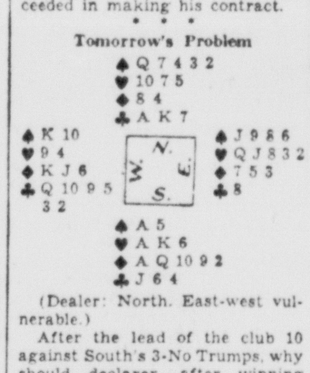
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: North. East-west vulnerable.)

After the lead of the club 10 against South's 3-No Trumps, why should declarer, after winning with the J, immediately lead a diamond from his own hand instead of planning to finesse the suit?

Frenchmen Forming Committees To Work Under Gen. De Galle

LONDON, Oct. 7 (AP)—The headquarters of Gen. Charles De Gaulle, leader of the French forces still fighting with Britain, announced today national committees of Frenchmen have been formed in the United States and nine other countries to act in close cooperation with the free French forces.

The announcement added that in twenty-nine other countries where Frenchmen have offered their services, Gen. De Gaulle has appointed representatives who are forming committees.

The nine countries in addition to the United States and Britain are Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, Chile, Mexico, Canada, Egypt, South Africa, and Australia, as well as the British colony of Mauritius, about 500 miles east of Madagascar.

Cure for Alcoholism Discovered by Doctor

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 7 (AP)—The Arkansas Gazette reported today that a Little Rock physician had "applied to a limited but successful extent" a cure for alcoholism based "on the principle of developing a 'sensitivity' to alcohol." The physician was not identified.

"The new treatment was compared with the experience of suffering sickness from a food or drink," the Gazette said. "After a person has become ill from eating a certain food, whether from overeating, poor preparation of the food, poor condition of the eater's physical system at the time, he may develop a dislike for the food.

"Such a dislike was described as a 'sensitivity.' Development of such a sensitivity toward alcohol was said to be difficult. The Little Rock physician used a 'refined agent,' which is injected into the tissues like typhoid vaccine or hay fever shots.

"After receiving the injection, patients reportedly lost their craving for alcohol. x x x The basic principle of the treatment was said to be nothing new and to have wide application in medical science."

THE DAILY STORY

SUMMER EVENING

Romance on a Park Bench. Two Lonely Souls Meet in the Big City and Find True Happiness.

By DALE C. BENNINGTON

The girl was blind. Bob knew even before he asked to share the park bench she was seated on. He waited until the woman who brought the girl had gone, then walked slowly over to where she sat.

"Would you mind if I sat down?" he said. "The park is very crowded."

"I do not mind." She spoke softly and then was silent. Bob wanted to talk. He liked to know about people. He wanted to know about her.

"Summer was a long time getting here," he said and tried to put a smile in his voice, "but it sure is great out tonight."

"It's very pleasant," she said shortly, and then, "Oh, you have a dog!"

"Mickey," he said simply and dropped his hand to the dog's head but drew it back quickly when he touched her hand. "Oh, I'm sorry," he said hastily.

"Please don't be," she said. "I didn't know your dog was there. I am blind."

Bob searched for something to say but there was nothing. The girl seemed to realize that he was trying to offer sympathy and she went on speaking quietly.

They talked of many things after that, small, simple things that are so interesting to people becoming friends. When the conversation lagged there was always Mickey, who sat very proud and straight on the grass between the feet of his master and his new-found friend. Once from force of habit, Bob reached over to pat the dog's head and again touched the soft, smooth hand of the girl.

There were other evenings. Impatiently Bob always waited until he knew she would be there. Once she did not come to the park and he sat far into the night, long after he had given up all hope. Mickey, too, was restless and kept moving about his knees, waiting for the friend who did not appear.

The next day was an eternity of waiting to Bob. Early evening found him in the park but he did not go near the bench until it was time. Then he went quickly, almost holding his breath.

"May I sit down?" Bob asked. And he wondered why his heart must pound so.

"I wondered if you—and Mickey—would come to the park," she said and Bob hoped that she was glad they were there.

The minutes flew by, and the hours, and she told him about the movie she had gone to the night before. Almost as good as seeing it, she said, for she had heard the dialogue and her mother had told her about the action. She told him about each thrilling moment of the movie and he listened, clinging to each word.

Along the path came two men, talking loudly and scuffing up the small stones on the ground. They came close to the bench and the girl stopped talking when she felt the hair rise on Mickey's neck. The dog growled low in his throat.

"Look what I found, Joe!" one of the men called to the other. They were standing close in front of the bench now. "Le's set and keep her comp'ny," the other rejointed, and it was very plain to Bob that the unwanted visitors had imbibed, not wisely, but too well.

Bob Searched for Something to Say

"Don't be afraid—Helen," Bob whispered and felt that in such a tense moment he might use the name he had heard her mother call her. Helen was not afraid and she spoke softly to the two men.

"I believe you can see I already have company. Please go away."

The man who had spoken last laughed coarsely. "Comp'ny? You don't call him fit comp'ny for a handsome girl like you?" Still speaking, he sank down heavily on the bench between her and Bob. "Why, he's no man, he's—"

The sentence was unfinished, for Bob had thrown an arm across the man's shoulders and with a crook of his elbow and a quick twist of his shoulders threw the man from the bench face down on the ground. The man rose quickly and grasping Bob's coat lapels, pulled him to his feet. Bob knew that he was no match for the large man, and sensing a blow, ducked his head quickly beneath the other's arm, and thrusting out his leg succeeded once more in throwing the man to the ground. But this time he also was there, his coat still clutched tightly by his assailant. In a split-second lull he heard Helen sobbing quietly and helplessly on the bench and something greater than his own strength rose up in him. Not knowing how he did it he suddenly found himself on top of the larger man, his hands in an iron grip about a thick throat. The man under him was coughing and Bob could hear the second man moving up behind him.

"Mickey!" he called and the growling dog leaped away from the girl's hand on his collar. Bob heard the startled scream of the second man as the teeth of the big dog found their mark. His hands growing stiff like iron claws at the ends of his arms, Bob heard the man run down the path, closely pursued by the barking dog.

Then, just as he realized that he could not hold the struggling man much longer, Bob heard the voice of O'Brien, the park policeman.

"What's goin' on here?" O'Brien shouted and quickly took the situation in hand. He almost had to pry Bob's hands from the prone man's throat.

Quickly Helen told the policeman what had happened. O'Brien listened and shook his head.

"I thought as much," he said, "but how you managed—and with two of 'em—."

Bob was breathing evenly by now. "Mickey drove the other one off." He stroked the dog's side.

The officer left with his stumbling prisoner and the park grew quiet once more. Neither Bob nor Helen spoke for several long moments. Then she said, "I've caused you so much trouble. Probably you won't feel like coming here again when you take Mickey for a walk."

"Take Mickey for a walk?" Bob said. "It's just the other way around, he takes me. You see, I'm blind."

THE DAILY STORY

SUMMER EVENING

Romance on a Park Bench. Two Lonely Souls Meet in the Big City and Find True Happiness.

By DALE C. BENNINGTON

The girl was blind. Bob knew even before he asked to share the park bench she was seated on. He waited until the woman who brought the girl had gone, then walked slowly over to where she sat.

"Would you mind if I sat down?" he said. "The park is very crowded."

"I do not mind." She spoke softly and then was silent. Bob wanted to talk. He liked to know about people. He wanted to know about her.

"Summer was a long time getting here," he said and tried to put a smile in his voice, "but it sure is great out tonight."

"It's very pleasant," she said shortly, and then, "Oh, you have a dog!"

"Mickey," he said simply and dropped his hand to the dog's head but drew it back quickly when he touched her hand. "Oh, I'm sorry," he said hastily.

"Please don't be," she said. "I didn't know your dog was there. I am blind."

Bob searched for something to say but there was nothing. The girl seemed to realize that he was trying to offer sympathy and she went on speaking quietly.

They talked of many things after that, small, simple things that are so interesting to people becoming friends. When the conversation lagged there was always Mickey, who sat very proud and straight on the grass between the feet of his master and his new-found friend. Once from force of habit, Bob reached over to pat the dog's head and again touched the soft, smooth hand of the girl.

There were other evenings. Impatiently Bob always waited until he knew she would be there. Once she did not come to the park and he sat far into the night, long after he had given up all hope. Mickey, too, was restless and kept moving about his knees, waiting for the friend who did not appear.

The next day was an eternity of waiting to Bob. Early evening found him in the park but he did not go near the bench until it was time. Then he went quickly, almost holding his breath.

"May I sit down?" Bob asked. And he wondered why his heart must pound so.

"I wondered if you—and Mickey—would come to the park," she said and Bob hoped that she was glad they were there.

The minutes flew by, and the hours, and she told him about the movie she had gone to the night before. Almost as good as seeing it, she said, for she had heard the dialogue and her mother had told her about the action. She told him about each thrilling moment of the movie and he listened, clinging to each word.

Along the path came two men, talking loudly and scuffing up the small stones on the ground. They came close to the bench and the girl stopped talking when she felt the hair rise on Mickey's neck. The dog growled low in his throat.

"Look what I found, Joe!" one of the men called to the other. They were standing close in front of the bench now. "Le's set and keep her comp'ny," the other rejointed, and it was very plain to Bob that the unwanted visitors had imbibed, not wisely, but too well.

Bob Searched for Something to Say

"Don't be afraid—Helen," Bob whispered and felt that in such a tense moment he might use the name he had heard her mother call her. Helen was not afraid and she spoke softly to the two men.

"I believe you can see I already have company. Please go away."

The man who had spoken last laughed coarsely. "Comp'ny? You don't call him fit comp'ny for a handsome girl like you?" Still speaking, he sank down heavily on the bench between her and Bob. "Why, he's no man, he's—"

The sentence was unfinished, for Bob had thrown an arm across the man's shoulders and with a crook of his elbow and a quick twist of his shoulders threw the man from the bench face down on the ground. The man rose quickly and grasping Bob's coat lapels, pulled him to his feet. Bob knew that he was no match for the large man, and sensing a blow, ducked his head quickly beneath the other's arm, and thrusting out his leg succeeded once more in throwing the man to the ground. But this time he also was there, his coat still clutched tightly by his assailant. In a split-second lull he heard Helen sobbing quietly and helplessly on the bench and something greater than his own strength rose up in him. Not knowing how he did it he suddenly found himself on top of the larger man, his hands in an iron grip about a thick throat. The man under him was coughing and Bob could hear the second man moving up behind him.

"Mickey!" he called and the growling dog leaped away from the girl's hand on his collar. Bob heard the startled scream of the second man as the teeth of the big dog found their mark. His hands growing stiff like iron claws at the ends of his arms, Bob heard the man run down the path, closely pursued by the barking dog.

Then, just as he realized that he could not hold the struggling man much longer, Bob heard the voice of O'Brien, the park policeman.

"What's goin' on here?" O'Brien shouted and quickly took the situation in hand. He almost had to pry Bob's hands from the prone man's throat.

Quickly Helen told the policeman what had happened. O'Brien listened and shook his head.

"I thought as much," he said, "but how you managed—and with two of 'em—"

Bob was breathing evenly by now. "Mickey drove the other one off." He stroked the dog's side.

The officer left with his stumbling prisoner and the park grew quiet once more. Neither Bob nor Helen spoke for several long moments. Then she said, "I've caused you so much trouble. Probably you won't feel like coming here again when you take Mickey for a walk."

"Take Mickey for a walk?" Bob said. "It's just the other way around, he takes me. You see, I'm blind."

Lonaconing Boy Loses 2 Fingers In Explosion

Donald Edward Miller, 16, Hurt when Dynamite Cap Explodes

LONACONING, Oct. 7 — Donald Edward Miller, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Miller, Beechwood district, today underwent an operation at Memorial hospital, Cumberland, for the amputation of the thumb and index finger of his left hand.

Young Miller was injured last evening when a dynamite cap exploded in his hand, blowing away part of the thumb and badly mangling the index finger.

It is understood the youth along with his sister, Lois Mae, 12, and a cousin, Jean McGee, 13, were playing yesterday afternoon in and about the old Koontz barn, Koontz Barracks, about two miles from here, when they found thirteen dynamite caps under the barn. The children thinking they had discovered some empty shells, played with the dangerous caps for some time. Lois Mae today said that Jean had buried the caps and Donald dug them up and gave her four, Jean four and kept five himself.

To remove the dirt which had collected upon the caps, the three went to the nearby creek to wash and clean them. It was while Donald was in the act of cleaning one of the caps with a wire that the explosion occured. The other two dropped their caps, which were later recovered and destroyed by Sidney Leake, a visitor at a nearby home.

Eight other children were also playing in the area, but the three did not disclose their discovery to them. Veteran miners here, who have used such caps, said the girls were lucky that their caps had not exploded also.

Donald is one of a family of four children. Another sister, Betty Alice, and a brother, John William, were in the area when the accident occured, but were not near their brother. He was removed to Memorial hospital in his father's car, who was at home, a mile and a half away.

The injured youth is a junior at Central high school.

Police Investigate Midland Burglary

MIDLAND, Oct. 7. —County authorities continued their investigation today of the burglary of the confectionery and home of Mrs. James H. Noel and her son, Homer Noel.

The burglary was committed Friday night while Mrs. Noel and her son slept in an apartment above the store. Entry was gained by removing a panel from a back door, a means of entry frequently employed in the county in the last several months.

Mr. Noel and authorities declined to state the amount taken. County Investigator Terrence J. Boyle said some of the loot was recovered, but refused to give details.

Reliable sources said the burglars removed money from Noel's trousers, which were hanging at the foot of the bed, and also took a pin Mrs. Noel had obtained from Scotland.

P-TA Convention Plans Advance At Frostburg

Mountain City To Be Host to State Association November 7-9

FROSTBURG, Oct. 7.—Parents of Frostburg and vicinity who have children attending school and who hold membership in the various Parent-Teacher associations of the county are making plans for the annual Maryland state convention of parents and teachers to be held here November 7, 8, and 9.

According to Walter Mackay, of the arrangements committee, approximately 300 delegates from every section of Maryland will attend, including state and national officers of the organization.

One of the features of the affair will be a banquet at the Gunter hotel Friday evening, November 8.

Mrs. S. W. Green, who is in charge of room reservations, stated today that it will be necessary for every person in Frostburg who has a spare room to submit his name and address at once, together with the number of rooms available. It will be helpful, she said, to have this information at once so that delegates may be assigned to local homes as soon as possible in order to avoid confusion after their arrival in the city.

Most of the delegates, according to a statement at local headquarters, will be middle-aged women of splendid character, and it will entail no special inconvenience for anyone to make room for one or more of the delegates for a nominal rent.

The meetings of the state convention will be held at State Teachers college, which will also be the headquarters for the state and national officers.

Concert Course

The department of music at State Teachers college, soliciting patronage for the fourth annual All-Star concert course, reminds the music lovers of Frostburg and vicinity that the finest organizations available will appear at the college this year. The audience poll that was taken at the final concert last year indicated that the most popular artists appearing on past courses were the orchestral groups.

The opening number this year will be the Little Philharmonic orchestra of Chicago, while the final number is a group of vocalists whose singing is often compared to a stringed group. For lighter entertainment, the department of music will present Russell Horton, tenor, who achieved prominence with Grace Moore in the movie, "I'll Take Romance." The third number, Maurice Dumesnil, pianist, was secured in response to an overwhelming request from the musical patrons that a pianist again be included.

Due to the large student body at the college, only a small number of outside tickets is available this year. Those desiring reservations should contact the following committee: Helen Simons, Leon Klompus, Dorothy Rollins, Jean Weaver, Mary Lou Dunn, Joe Shockley, Leslie Eisentrout, Anna Davis, Betty Conrad, Harriet Brode, Harry Keller and Charles Gover.

The first concert will be presented Wednesday evening, October 23, at the college auditorium.

LONACONING, Oct. 7 — Mrs. Lloyd B. Shaw, Moscow, today took over her duties as county supervisor of the Work Projects Administration's hot lunch program which was officially opened at 9 a. m. at the Hammond Street school at Westernport.

Mrs. Shaw's appointment was made known today by Miss Dorothy C. Worrilow, district director of professional and service projects. Mrs. Shaw, formerly of Lonaconing, is well known throughout the county, having been identified prominently in club work. Her office will be located in the Union Street school building in Cumberland, which also quarters the recreation office and Cumberland sewing room project.

The new supervisor was introduced to the ten workers by Miss Ruth Weber, Cumberland, assistant WPA director and a graduate of the Home Economics department of the University of Maryland. HYNDMAN, PJa., Oct. 7.—The regular election board has been named by Judge Harry C. Many Hyndman motorists took advantage of the summer weather Sunday to take a spin over the super-highway that bcrosses the northern section of Bedford county. Collision with Police Prowl Car Foils Kidnaping at Clarksburg

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Oct. 7 — (AP)—An automobile bumped into a police prowl car, a kidnaping victim shouted out his plight and two men went to jail to face abduction and robbery charges, Police Chief Jules Brasseur related today.

Brasseur himself was in the car which was hit late Saturday night by a machine taken from Dennis Warner, collector for a Clarksburg chain store, by two former convicts.

The chief identified the men as Vendel Yonavak, 24, of Clarksburg, and George Lacaria, formerly of Chicago. He said they were held without charge but that they "will face at least charges of armed robbery and kidnaping."

The formal swearing of warrants awaited a conference between Brasseur and Prosecutor J. Philip Clifford.

The pair hid in the back seat of Warner's car while it was parked in front of the stores Saturday night, Brasseur related, and when he entered, put a gun to his head and ordered him to drive to nearby Glen Falls.

Warner said he was ordered to turn over $1,182.60 in company money and $50 from his own pocketbook, together with $1,129.95 in endorsed checks, which were thrown away.

Yonavak bound Warner's feet and hands, the police chief added, but Warner cried out when the accident occurred at a street intersection and Yonavak was arrested. Lacaria was taken into custody shortly afterward in another car, Brasseur related.

The police department said Lacaria was released on parole in April from the Illinois state penitentiary at Joliet, where he served part of a term for robbery and that Yonavak served a term at Moundsville state penitentiary for breaking and entering.

Lonaconing Boy Loses 2 Fingers In Explosion

Donald Edward Miller, 16, Hurt when Dynamite Cap Explodes

LONACONING, Oct. 7 — Donald Edward Miller, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Miller, Beechwood district, today underwent an operation at Memorial hospital, Cumberland, for the amputation of the thumb and index finger of his left hand.

Young Miller was injured last evening when a dynamite cap exploded in his hand, blowing away part of the thumb and badly mangling the index finger.

It is understood the youth along with his sister, Lois Mae, 12, and a cousin, Jean McGee, 13, were playing yesterday afternoon in and about the old Koontz barn, Koontz Barracks, about two miles from here, when they found thirteen dynamite caps under the barn. The children thinking they had discovered some empty shells, played with the dangerous caps for some time. Lois Mae today said that Jean had buried the caps and Donald dug them up and gave her four, Jean four and kept five himself.

To remove the dirt which had collected upon the caps, the three went to the nearby creek to wash and clean them. It was while Donald was in the act of cleaning one of the caps with a wire that the explosion occured. The other two dropped their caps, which were later recovered and destroyed by Sidney Leake, a visitor at a nearby home.

Eight other children were also playing in the area, but the three did not disclose their discovery to them. Veteran miners here, who have used such caps, said the girls were lucky that their caps had not exploded also.

Donald is one of a family of four children. Another sister, Betty Alice, and a brother, John William, were in the area when the accident occured, but were not near their brother. He was removed to Memorial hospital in his father's car, who was at home, a mile and a half away.

The injured youth is a junior at Central high school.

P-TA Convention Plans Advance At Frostburg

Mountain City To Be Host to State Association November 7-9

FROSTBURG, Oct. 7—Parents of Frostburg and vicinity who have children attending school and who hold membership in the various Parent-Teacher associations of the county are making plans for the annual Maryland state convention of parents and teachers to be held here November 7, 8, and 9.

According to Walter Mackay, of the arrangements committee, approximately 300 delegates from every section of Maryland will attend, including state and national officers of the organization.

One of the features of the affair will be a banquet at the Gunter hotel Friday evening, November 8.

Mrs. S. W. Green, who is in charge of room reservations, stated today that it will be necessary for every person in Frostburg who has a spare room to submit his name and address at once, together with the number of rooms available. It will be helpful, she said, to have this information at once so that delegates may be assigned to local homes as soon as possible in order to avoid confusion after their arrival in the city.

Most of the delegates, according to a statement at local headquarters, will be middle-aged women of splendid character, and it will entail no special inconvenience for anyone to make room for one or more of the delegates for a nominal rent.

The meetings of the state convention will be held at State Teachers college, which will also be the headquarters for the state and national officers.

Concert Course

The department of music at State Teachers college, soliciting patronage for the fourth annual All-Star concert course, reminds the music lovers of Frostburg and vicinity that the finest organizations available will appear at the college this year. The audience poll that was taken at the final concert last year indicated that the most popular artists appearing on past courses were the orchestral groups.

The opening number this year will be the Little Philharmonic orchestra of Chicago, while the final number is a group of vocalists whose singing is often compared to a stringed group. For lighter entertainment, the department of music will present Russell Horton, tenor, who achieved prominence with Grace Moore in the movie, "I'll Take Romance." The third number, Maurice Dumesnil, pianist, was secured in response to an overwhelming request from the musical patrons that a pianist again be included.

Due to the large student body at the college, only a small number of outside tickets is available this year. Those desiring reservations should contact the following committee: Helen Simons, Leon Klompus, Dorothy Rollins, Jean Weaver, Mary Lou Dunn, Joe Shockley, Leslie Eisentrout, Anna Davis, Betty Conrad, Harriet Brode, Harry Keller and Charles Gover.

The first concert will be presented Wednesday evening, October 23, at the college auditorium.

Collision with Police Prowl Car Foils Kidnaping at Clarksburg

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Oct. 7 — (AP)—An automobile bumped into a police prowl car, a kidnaping victim shouted out his plight and two men went to jail to face abduction and robbery charges, Police Chief Jules Brasseur related today.

Brasseur himself was in the car which was hit late Saturday night by a machine taken from Dennis Warner, collector for a Clarksburg chain store, by two former convicts.

The chief identified the men as Vendel Yonavak, 24, of Clarksburg, and George Lacaria, formerly of Chicago. He said they were held without charge but that they "will face at least charges of armed robbery and kidnaping."

The formal swearing of warrants awaited a conference between Brasseur and Prosecutor J. Philip Clifford.

The pair hid in the back seat of Warner's car while it was parked in front of the stores Saturday night, Brasseur related, and when he entered, put a gun to his head and ordered him to drive to nearby Glen Falls.

Warner said he was ordered to turn over $1,182.60 in company money and $50 from his own pocketbook, together with $1,129.95 in endorsed checks, which were thrown away.

Yonavak bound Warner's feet and hands, the police chief added, but Warner cried out when the accident occurred at a street intersection and Yonavak was arrested. Lacaria was taken into custody shortly afterward in another car, Brasseur related.

The police department said Lacaria was released on parole in April from the Illinois state penitentiary at Joliet, where he served part of a term for robbery and that Yonavak served a term at Moundsville state penitentiary for breaking and entering.

School Strike Status Indefinite After Mass Meeting at Midland

Each Community To Decide Individually what Action To Take

MIDLAND, Oct. 7 (Special)—Little progress toward a definite conclusion of the school strike was made here tonight, with each community left to decide for itself what course to follow. Indications were, however, that the "back-to-school" movement already underway will continue.

Some 250 citizens of the Mt. Savage-Lonaconing sector held a mass meeting in Firemen's hall here and heard reports as to the policy to be followed in the communities protesting the school consolidation program. The reports included:

Ocean—half the striking pupils returned to school today; Carlos—pupils to remain out until satisfaction received; Lord—pupils still 100 per cent out of school; Midlothian — little change, with about half the pupils back in school; Midland—three out of 117 junior pupils going to Frostburg, many elementary pupils back in school;; Gilmore— no children in school, but most to return tomorrow (Tuesday).

There was some dispute about the situation at Gilmore, but it was said Superintendent of Schools Charles L. Kopp promised a bus to transport the children from Gilmore to Midland tomorrow morning. This action was promised after a conference with Hugh McGann and Thomas Rainey.

The policy to be followed in Midland and Mt. Savage is to be decided tomorrow (Tuesday) night at meetings at 7:30 o'clock. The Midland meeting is scheduled for Firemen's hall; that at Mt. Savage, for the high school. The Mt. Savage elementary-junior high school reported an attendance of 189 today out of an enrollment of 383.

Speakers took issue with a published statement quoting Superintendent Kopp as saying that, with the exception of Mt. Savage, delegations representing the affected communities had approved the consolidation program at a meeting in his office in August. Delegates present at the conference said there might have been some indication that the program was satisfactory, but that no definite commitments were made.

An editorial in The Sunday Times criticizing the strike also drew the fire of several speakers.

Although all indications pointed to a gradual end to the strike, on a large scale, at least—it was emphasized that parents will continue their protests.

School Strike Status Indefinite After Mass Meeting at Midland

Each Community To Decide Individually what Action To Take

MIDLAND, Oct. 7 (Special)—Little progress toward a definite conclusion of the school strike was made here tonight, with each community left to decide for itself what course to follow. Indications were, however, that the "back-to-school" movement already underway will continue.

Some 250 citizens of the Mt. Savage-Lonaconing sector held a mass meeting in Firemen's hall here and heard reports as to the policy to be followed in the communities protesting the school consolidation program. The reports included:

Ocean—half the striking pupils returned to school today; Carlos—pupils to remain out until satisfaction received; Lord—pupils still 100 per cent out of school; Midlothian — little change, with about half the pupils back in school; Midland—three out of 117 junior pupils going to Frostburg, many elementary pupils back in school;; Gilmore— no children in school, but most to return tomorrow (Tuesday).

There was some dispute about the situation at Gilmore, but it was said Superintendent of Schools Charles L. Kopp promised a bus to transport the children from Gilmore to Midland tomorrow morning. This action was promised after a conference with Hugh McGann and Thomas Rainey.

The policy to be followed in Midland and Mt. Savage is to be decided tomorrow (Tuesday) night at meetings at 7:30 o'clock. The Midland meeting is scheduled for Firemen's hall; that at Mt. Savage, for the high school. The Mt. Savage elementary-junior high school reported an attendance of 189 today out of an enrollment of 383.

Speakers took issue with a published statement quoting Superintendent Kopp as saying that, with the exception of Mt. Savage, delegations representing the affected communities had approved the consolidation program at a meeting in his office in August. Delegates present at the conference said there might have been some indication that the program was satisfactory, but that no definite commitments were made.

An editorial in The Sunday Times criticizing the strike also drew the fire of several speakers.

Although all indications pointed to a gradual end to the strike, on a large scale, at least—it was emphasized that parents will continue their protests.

Industrial Stocks Decline after Prices Are Irregular Most of Day

Growing Rift Between U. S. and Japan Alarms Some Traders

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, Oct. 7. (AP)—Industrial stocks turned downward at the last in today's market after holding to exceptionally slim territory during the greater part of the proceedings.

Trends were indefinite from the start and dealings slack. Offerings began to come out in the final hour, however, and closing losses of fractions to a point or so predominated. At that, the rails were fairly resistant, as were a number of preferreds and specialties.

War news was without any particular market influence, brokers said, although some traders saw confusing speculative implications in the growing rift between the United States and Japan. Fears also were expressed that the next Nazi thrust at England might prove an unsettling factor. At the same time, prevailing hopeful business developments at home bolstered individual stocks and restricted selling elsewhere.

The Associated Press average of sixty stocks was off .2 of a point at 44.8. Transfers totaled 392,290 shares against 466,080 last Friday, lowest turnover for a full session since Sept. 20.

U. S. Steel and Bethlehem gave ground notwithstanding a substantial upturn in this week's estimated operations for the industry.

General Motors and Chrysler were off fractionally in the face of forecasts of expanding sales and factory activities. Santa Fe was up a shade and other carriers registered minimum declines as better operating revenues for the principal roads were predicted.

On the offside were Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, Montgomery Ward, United Aircraft, Consolidated Edison, du Pont, General Electric, Westinghouse, Texas Corp., Anaconda, American Smelting and Western Union.

Theaters Today

Songs and Dances Are Featured in Picture

An array of singers, dancers and comedy favorites, and nine new songs will be presented in "Argentine Nights," Universal musical film coming to the New Liberty theater tomorrow.

The Ritz Brothers are co-starred in the picture with the Andrews Sisters, swing trio whose songs on phonograph records, radio and the stage are known to many.

Constance Moore, young screen songstress, has the romantic lead with George Reeves, film newcomer, and top supporting roles are played by Peggy Moran, Anne Nagel, Kathryn Adams and Julie Duncan.

The "Brooklynonga," a combination of Brooklyn jitter-bug and South American conga steps, is introduced by the Ritz Brothers, and the Andrews Sisters sing four new rhythm songs in addition to doing original dances.

Action of the story takes place in the glamorous atmosphere of the Argentine pampas country, and is highlighted throughout by music and comedy.

IN MUSICAL FARCE

The Andrews Sisters, LaVerne (L), Patty and Maxene, who co-star with the Ritz brothers in Universal's musical farce, "Argentine Nights".

Two Film Features Are Listed at Strand

A color cartoon and the Paramount and Fox News flashes round out the program.

Few young bands, in the first year or two of their activity have made such strides as has Will Bradley and his orchestra, featuring Ray McKinley on the drums. Freddy Slack on the piano and Jimmy Valentine as a vocalist, which comes to the Strand Thursday for the one day only.

"The Young Man with a Band," as he is billed, has played many leading hotels, such as the Ritz Carlton in Boston and the Jung in New Orleans, and the campuses of the leading colleges, Harvard, Vassar, Williams, Washington and Lee and others. He has been featured with his crew on the stage of the Paramount theater in New York, at the Steel Pier in Atlantic City, at the swanky Surf Beach Club at Virginia Beach, at the Famous Door, cradle of swing, in New York and at the Dancing Campus at the World's fair.

Bradley, McKinley and their band, after recording "Hallelujah", "Strange Cargo", and "Rhumboogie", saw one of their discs, "Beat Me Daddy, Eight to the Bar" climb to the top of the sales list of Columbia records, a list which includes many other famous and popular dance bands.

Embassy Schedules Two Film Features

The story of a crime-fighter who uses science's most up-to-the-minute methods, as well as the underworld's most deadly stratagems to rid his city of gangsters is told in Columbia's "The Secret Seven", starting tomorrow at the Embassy theater.

Florence Rice, Bruce Bennett and Barton MacLane are the principal players.

Bennett is seen as a yongster with a "record," a youthful misstep which sent him to jail. During his term, in an eager effort to rehabilitate himself, he studies chemical science, gathering a knowledge which he puts to effective use upon his release.

Unable to place his services at the disposal of the Police Department, whose chief refuses to use modern technique in fighting modern crime, Bennett organizes six other scientists into a gang-fighting band, "The Secret Seven." They finally are accepted by the police department.

Monogram's story of "The Last Alarm" will also start tomorrow at the Embassy.

For the romantic leads the director chose Warren Hull and Polly Ann Young. Miss Young last played in the Hal Roach production "Turnabout," while Warren Hull just concluded several pictures at Columbia, and has also played in many Monogram films.

George Pembroke has the important role of Wendell, a crazed incendiary.

Split Thanksgiving Again This Year

NEW YORK, Oct. 7 (AP)—Thanksgiving turkey dinners will be eaten on Nov. 21 in 31 states this year. That's the date to be designated Thanksgiving day by President Roosevelt.

Gov. Julius Hell of Wisconsin hasn't reached an answer to the question yet, but the Association of National Advertisers, Inc., said today that the other sixteen states would stay with tradition and observe the last Thursday of the month—Nov. 28.

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, Oct. 7. (AP)—Industrial stocks turned downward at the last in today's market after holding to exceptionally slim territory during the greater part of the proceedings.

Trends were indefinite from the start and dealings slack. Offerings began to come out in the final hour, however, and closing losses of fractions to a point or so predominated. At that, the rails were fairly resistant, as were a number of preferreds and specialties.

War news was without any particular market influence, brokers said, although some traders saw confusing speculative implications in the growing rift between the United States and Japan. Fears also were expressed that the next Nazi thrust at England might prove an unsettling factor. At the same time, prevailing hopeful business developments at home bolstered individual stocks and restricted selling elsewhere.

The Associated Press average of sixty stocks was off .2 of a point at 44.8. Transfers totaled 392,290 shares against 466,080 last Friday, lowest turnover for a full session since Sept. 20.

U. S. Steel and Bethlehem gave ground notwithstanding a substantial upturn in this week's estimated operations for the industry.

General Motors and Chrysler were off fractionally in the face of forecasts of expanding sales and factory activities. Santa Fe was up a shade and other carriers registered minimum declines as better operating revenues for the principal roads were predicted.

On the offside were Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, Montgomery Ward, United Aircraft, Consolidated Edison, du Pont, General Electric, Westinghouse, Texas Corp., Anaconda, American Smelting and Western Union.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7 (AP)—Japanese bonds cracked in today's market but the bulk of the domestic list held up well and there were further gains in the German group.

Mounting tension in the Japanese government's relations with some other powers, including the United States, was blamed by brokers for the performance of Japan's loans.

U. S. governments were quiet but firm, ending as much as 10:32 of a point higher.

Theaters Today

Songs and Dances Are Featured in Picture

An array of singers, dancers and comedy favorites, and nine new songs will be presented in "Argentine Nights," Universal musical film coming to the New Liberty theater tomorrow.

The Ritz Brothers are co-starred in the picture with the Andrews Sisters, swing trio whose songs on phonograph records, radio and the stage are known to many.

Constance Moore, young screen songstress, has the romantic lead with George Reeves, film newcomer, and top supporting roles are played by Peggy Moran, Anne Nagel, Kathryn Adams and Julie Duncan.

The "Brooklynonga," a combination of Brooklyn jitter-bug and South American conga steps, is introduced by the Ritz Brothers, and the Andrews Sisters sing four new rhythm songs in addition to doing original dances.

Action of the story takes place in the glamorous atmosphere of the Argentine pampas country, and is highlighted throughout by music and comedy.

Two Film Features Are Listed at Strand

A color cartoon and the Paramount and Fox News flashes round out the program.

Few young bands, in the first year or two of their activity have made such strides as has Will Bradley and his orchestra, featuring Ray McKinley on the drums, Freddy Slack on the piano and Jimmy Valentine as a vocalist, which comes to the Strand Thursday for the one day only.

"The Young Man with a Band," as he is billed, has played many leading hotels, such as the Ritz Carlton in Boston and the Jung in New Orleans, and the campuses of the leading colleges, Harvard, Vassar, Williams, Washington and Lee and others. He has been featured with his crew on the stage of the Paramount theater in New York, at the Steel Pier in Atlantic City, at the swanky Surf Beach Club at Virginia Beach, at the Famous Door, cradle of swing, in New York and at the Dancing Campus at the World's fair.

Bradley, McKinley and their band, after recording "Hallelujah", "Strange Cargo", and "Rhumboogie", saw one of their discs, "Beat Me Daddy, Eight to the Bar" climb to the top of the sales list of Columbia records, a list which includes many other famous and popular dance bands.

Embassy Schedules Two Film Features

The story of a crime-fighter who uses science's most up-to-the-minute methods, as well as the underworld's most deadly stratagems to rid his city of gangsters is told in Columbia's "The Secret Seven", starting tomorrow at the Embassy theater.

Florence Rice, Bruce Bennett and Barton MacLane are the principal players.

Bennett is seen as a youngster with a "record," a youthful misstep which sent him to jail. During his term, in an eager effort to rehabilitate himself, he studies chemical science, gathering a knowledge which he puts to effective use upon his release.

Unable to place his services at the disposal of the Police Department, whose chief refuses to use modern technique in fighting modern crime, Bennett organizes six other scientists into a gang-fighting band, "The Secret Seven." They finally are accepted by the police department.

Monogram's story of "The Last Alarm" will also start tomorrow at the Embassy.

For the romantic leads the director chose Warren Hull and Polly Ann Young. Miss Young last played in the Hal Roach production "Turnabout," while Warren Hull just concluded several pictures at Columbia, and has also played in many Monogram films.

George Pembroke has the important role of Wendell, a crazed incendiary.

The second chapter in "The Adventures of Red Ryder" will be on the program also.

IN MUSICAL FARCE

The Andrews Sisters, LaVerne (L), Patty and Maxene, who co-star with the Ritz brothers in Universal's musical farce, "Argentine Nights".

Split Thanksgiving Again This Year

NEW YORK, Oct. 7 (AP)—Thanksgiving turkey dinners will be eaten on Nov. 21 in 31 states this year. That's the date to be designated Thanksgiving day by President Roosevelt.

Gov. Julius Heil of Wisconsin hasn't reached an answer to the question yet, but the Association of National Advertisers, Inc., said today that the other sixteen states would stay with tradition and observe the last Thursday of the month—Nov. 28.

GLAMOUR GIRL

Billy Seward, RKO Glamour Girl, is featured in "One Crowded Hour," the new mystery picture showing at the Strand theater Thursday.

Walters Turns Tigers Back 4-0 to Even Series

Cincinnati Now On Even Terms As Teams Await Finale Today

formance, stopping this rally and allowing only one run and five hits in the 6⅔ innings he pitched.

But as on the other occasion, Gorsica's work was wasted because Walters kept whipping his fast downer to the plate where the Tigers could do nothing with it. Bucky also benefitted from the sort of tight defense that brought the Reds their pennant, but which has shown only in spasms in this series.

As the result of the Reds' triumph the 1940 World Series will be the first to go seven games since the St. Louis Cardinals beat these same Tigers in 1934 for the last World Championship won by a National League club.

Derringer Pitches Today

Cincinnati was in a good strategic position to repeat this victory by having big Paul Derringer ready for the final game here tomorrow with two day's rest since whipping the Bengals in Detroit Saturday.

Manager Bill McKechnie for once had no hesitation in naming Derringer as his certain starter.

The Tigers appeared almost as certain to come back with Buck Newsom on one day's rest and hope that he can continue the mastery that subdued the Reds last Wednesday and again on Sunday. He thus would be in line to join five other pitchers who have won three games in a series of seven or fewer games.

The Reds, although making two errors behind Walters today, looked the best they have during the series in batting out a 10-hit barrage against the three Detroit pitchers and supporting Walters with three double plays and many remarkable individual stops and throws.

Walters struck out only two men, but he walked only two and with the help of his teammates kept out of serious jams. He retired the first five men he faced in order and after giving up a walk and a single in the second forced Birdie Tebbetts to ground out.

In the third when Dick Bartell doubled with one out and went to third on a fly, Walters made Charley Gehringer pop up foul to catcher Jim Wilson.

In the fourth, sixth and ninth innings Frank McCormick, Eddie Joost and Billy Myers helped out with double plays. The two errors had no effect on the game. In the eighth inning first baseman McCormick tried to beat pinchhitter Earl Averill to the bag after fielding a grounder and dropped the ball in a collision with umpire Lee Ballanfant and in the ninth Myers made a wild throw after a nice fielding play on a grounder by Gehringer.

Two Runners Reach Third

Only in the third and ninth did a runner get as far as third and in the latter case it was Averill who dashed across while the Red infielders were busy making a double play on two others.

The Reds' filling the bases in both the sixth and seventh innings netted only one run, but this lack of punch was their handicap all year and the fine fielding and pitching more than made up for it. Cincinnati's third run came during the sixth inning threat. Ripple and Wilson hit successive singles and Joost walked to fill the stations. Myers hit the first ball back at the pitcher and Gorsica threw to the plate to force Ripple. Then Walters came to bat and knocked a grounder at Pinky Higgins and Wilson was able to beat the throw to the plate. A double play ended this uprising.

In the seventh Mike McCormick led off with a sizzling single right between Gorsica's legs, went to second on a sacrifice, and, after another out, Gorsica loaded the bases with two walks, one of them intentional. However, Wilson grounded out to retire the side.

Expect Record Crowd

Every one of the Reds except Joost and Myers shared in the hitting spree and Werber's two safeties boosted his total for the series to ten, the most for any player on either club.

Only three of the Tigers managed to hit off Walters, Bartell and York getting two each and Higgins one. Bartell was removed for pinchhitter Billy Sullivan in the eighth.

After the game Wilson revealed he had pulled a muscle in his right leg racing home in the sixth, but he said he expected to be able to play in tomorrow's finale.

Tickets for the last game went on sale immediately after today's tussle and a capacity crowd was expected. Clear weather was anticipated.

Louisville Trims Bears

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 7 (AP)—Cecil (Tex) Hughson, lanky right hander, pitched the Louisville Colonels back into the running in the 1940 Little World Series tonight with a 6 to 2 victory over the Newark Bears of the International League. Newark now holds a 3 to 2 edge in games in the best-of-seven series.

PITCHES AND BATS REDS TO VICTORY

Bucky Walters

The Cincinnati Reds are back on even terms with the Detroit Tigers in the 1940 World Series, thanks to Walters whose pitching and hitting were important factors in the Reds 4 to 0 victory yesterday. Walters in winning his second game of the series held the hard-hitting Tigers to five scattered hits and climaxed a brilliant performance by hitting a home run in the eighth inning for Cincinnati's fourth run of the game.

Notes on Sixth World Series Game

By JOHN FRYE

CINCINNATI, Oct. 7 (AP)—Win, lose or draw (and don't think the last isn't possible in this slightly eccentric world) this 1940 World Series has proved that Bucky Walters is a ball player.

It's been a long time since anybody saw a pitcher who could starve some of the best sluggers of the Major Leagues, field like a farmer bringing in the harvest, and top it off with a home run. Bucky done it.

Today was the last chance for either Manager Bill McKechnie of the Reds or Del Baker of the Tigers to announce after the game "tomorrow's another day." It was Del's turn today.

Before the game Baker put on a serene smile at the thought of how far his Tigers had gone without the 91 chattels amancipated by Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis.

Del is as high as ever on Floyd Giebelf, from Pennsboro, W. Va. The rookie pitcher who clinched the pennant for the Tigers up in Cleveland.

"He may never pitch another game like that," said Del, "but he won't have to. He's got poise if he never had anything else. He'll come along."

Bill Weber, the Reds' hot stuff at third base, has his own explanation of why he and Pinky Higgins, the Tigers' same, have been so busy.

"In a tight series like this," Bill said, "everybody's so anxious that they're hitting a little ahead of the ball and that sends it down our way."

Bill also had little sympathy for certain gentlemen who, he was told, closed their eyes and prayed when he fielded a ball in his typical style—reading the trademark before lining it to Frank McCormick at first.

Scalpers were standing in front of the downtown hotels with their tongues hanging out. Some were glad to get carfare home out of the day's business. At the park one woman gave away a good box seat before she went in.

Rudy York got his sports confused and pulled the "statue of liberty" play on Ival Goodman's schoolboy hopper in the first. Werber knew it was football weather but stuck to baseball and scored from third.—

Cincinnati isn't where Schoolboy Rowe got his education.

Frank Lane, the Reds' farm chief, carved out the best understatement of the series as the Reds took the field to start the game.

"If we don't win today," said Frank shrewdly, "the series is practically over."

Fall Tennis Tourney Opens at Hot Springs

Blaze Face

Chance Sun, winner of the rich Belmont Futurity of 1934, is a horse with a white face. Horsemen call such marking "blaze face." Chance Sun, by the way, is a dominant breeder in respect to his white face and many of his sons and daughters are marked very similar to him.

Goodman hit the first pitch on a bounce to York about 30 feet from first base and reached the bag for a single before Rowe could get there to take a throw, Werber scoring on the play.

F. McCormick waited out a count of two balls and one strike, and then shot a vicious single along the third base line, Goodman holding up at second.

John Gorsica, a right-hander, started warming up in the Tiger bull pen.

Wilson took one strike, popped a foul while trying to bunt, and then struck out on the third pitch.

Higgins raced to his left to make an almost miraculous pickup of Joost's grounder and throw to Gehringer to force Ripple at second.

No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

Sixth Inning Reds

Ripple fouled off the first pitch and then poked a single past second.

When York came rushing in to protect against a bunt, Wilson boosted a single just over his head and Ripple went all the way to third before Campbell could come in and get the ball to make a play.

Joost walked on five pitches to fill the bases.

Fred Hutchinson, a righthander, started warming up in Detroit's bull pen.

On the first pitch, Myers bounced high to Gorsica wo tossed the ball to Tebbetts to force Ripple at the plate, leaving the bases loaded.

After working the count to three and two, Walters topped the ball toward third base and Wilson beat Higgins' throw to Tebbetts to score, and the bases were left loaded. The play was scored as a fielder's choice with no assist and no error.

No runs, one hit, no errors, three left.

Eighth Inning Tigers

Werber came in fast almost to the pitcher's box to take Tebbetts' grounder and throw him out.

Earl Averill batted for Gorsica.

Averill sent a grounder to F. McCormick back of first and the first beseman tried to beat the runner to the bag, ending in what appeared to be a deadheat and then colliding with umpire Ballanfant outside the base line and dropping the ball as both men fell to the ground. The umpire ruled Averill safe and there was a long argument, followed by a conference between Ballanfant and Ormsby which ended with the runner still on the bag. Manager McKechnie continued the argument with Ormsby for several minutes and the crowd booed and when Ormsby finally motioned McKechnie away, (Scorers temporarily reserved a ruling on the play), F. McCormick was charged with an error.

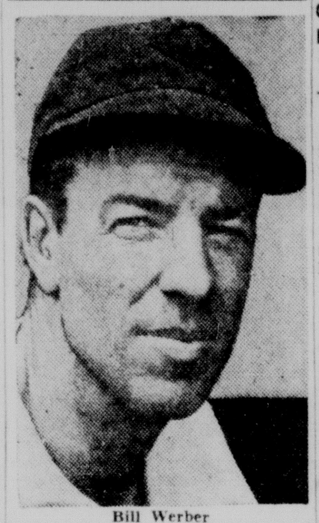
LEADING HITTER IN WORLD SERIES



Bill Werber

Werber a fellow who two years ago was waived out of the American League is one of the brightest stars of the present World Series. The Cincinnati third baseman is not only the leading hitter on both teams but his work at third base has been sensational. In the crucial sixth game yesterday, Billy started two double-plays on balls which probably no other third-sacker in baseball could have made. The former American Leaguer has made 10 hits in 23 times at bat and is hitting 434 for the series.

Ohio Is Dressed For Murder For Its Game With Cornell

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

By JOHN LARDER

CINCINNATI, Oct. 7—The best football game of the year, east of the Mississippi and North of Mason and Dixon's line, now promises to be Ohio State vs. Cornell—and I wish to warn all hands along Cayuga's waters to batten down the hatches and heave her to on the starboard tack, for Ohio State is coming dressed for a murder.

That is all you hear in Ohio, and even the citizens in Illinois, Michigan, Indiana and other adjacent hot spots are spiking their local business for a couple of weeks to watch and see what happens when Ohio State gets mad.

More than two weeks to go, and they are holding their breath already. That's a nice foundation for a football game. If I can believe Mr. Red McQueen, a stalwart pilgrim from Hawaii, the fever has spread as far as Honolulu. Mr. McQueen tells be he is in this country ostensibly to investigate conditions among the starving farodealers, but actually to get as close as he can to the Ohio State-Cornell game.

"Molakolua!" exclaims Mr. McQueen, which seems to be a Hawaiian expression meaning "I hope nobody gets killed that can't be spared."

Maybe They Started Something

If they are talking about the game in Honolulu, then it may safely be said that Cornell and Ohio State have started something—at least, Cornell started something, by coming West last fall and stupefying the famous downtown quarterbacks of Columbus, Ohio, with a knockout victory over the team of teams, which is a bashful way they have in Columbus of speaking of the team of teams.

Other parts of the country are interested because, having observed Ohio State in defeat, they wonder what Ohio State can do in the way of revenge.

They are also interested because Ohio State and Cornell have a couple of great teams developing in 1940 and because the geographical friction between Big Ten and Ivy League is considerable.

Of course, the interest will die down to some extent if Cornell should lose meanwhile to Army or Syracuse, or if Ohio should blow to Duke to Northwestern or Minnesota, as can very possibly happen, but barring such anticlimactic transactions, the game is hot.

The last report from my operative on the Cornell beat has it that Mr. Carl Snavely, the mastermind of that parish, is viewing the issue with profound despondency. Decoded, that means that Mr. Snavely doesn't like the looks of things. Under his mournful influence, the whole town is going around biting his finger-nails and pricing tickets to Tahiti.

His Despair Professional

True, Mr. Snavely is not always reliable in these matters. A lot of his despair is professional, as seems to be the custom with Cornell coaches, betinning with Gloomy Gilmour Dobie. But undoubtedly Cornell feels apprensive.

And that is not the way things are in Ohio. They take the defeat of their team last year to be an act of sacrifice. They didn't expect it, and they are not going to stand for it.

A Columbus merchant, in Cincinnati for the world series, tells me that Coach Francis (shut-the-gates of-mercy) Schmidt will not retain his job if Ohio fails to inflict gruesome revenge on Cornell at Ithaca October 26. In other words, he's got to beat Cornell or he's out.

That seems a trifle fanatical, and very likely my informant is talking through his new autumn turban, but they do take their football hard at Ohio State and vicinity, and fanaticism is their favorite sport. There is practically nobody in the neighborhood who does not know fifteen per cent more about football than Coach Schmidt, though sometimes, to hear them tell it, that ain't much.

It's a safe bet that every one of Ohio State's 1,246,000 coaches (figures just released by census bureau) will be working in dead earnest, from now till then, to lick Cornell. That is what is in store for Cornell, and if you happen to be going by Lake Cayuga, pass the word.

Warren Wright Is The Outstanding Horseman of Year

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 7 (AP) — Warren Wright, who retired as a "big" businessman several years ago to devote his time to horse racing, is to receive Thursday night the thoroughbred club of America's award of "outstanding horseman of the year."

Wright, once president of the Calumet Baking Powder Company and a director of several big corporations and banks, most of them in Chicago, now devotes much of his time to the turf. His Calumet Farm, on the main highway between Keeneland race track and Lexington, is one of the show places in the Bluegrass country.

In Whirlaway, Wright has one of the top-notch 2-year olds of 1940.

Carolan has played quite a bit the last two years, while Loibel is making a strong bid for a regular position on the team.

Walters Turns Tigers Back 4-0 to Even Series

Cincinnati Now On Even Terms As Teams Await Finale Today

formance, stopping this rally and allowing only one run and five hits in the 6⅔ innings he pitched.

But as on the other occasion, Gorsica's work was wasted because Walters kept whipping his fast downer to the plate where the Tigers could do nothing with it. Bucky also benefitted from the sort of tight defense that brought the Reds their pennant, but which has shown only in spasms in this series.

As the result of the Reds' triumph the 1940 World Series will be the first to go seven games since the St. Louis Cardinals beat these same Tigers in 1934 for the last World Championship won by a National League club.

Derringer Pitches Today

Cincinnati was in a good strategic position to repeat this victory by having big Paul Derringer ready for the final game here tomorrow with two day's rest since whipping the Bengals in Detroit Saturday.

Manager Bill McKechnie for once had no hesitation in naming Derringer as his certain starter.

The Tigers appeared almost as certain to come back with Buck Newsom on one day's rest and hope that he can continue the mastery that subdued the Reds last Wednesday and again on Sunday. He thus would be in line to join five other pitchers who have won three games in a series of seven or fewer games.

The Reds, although making two errors behind Walters today, looked the best they have during the series in batting out a 10-hit barrage against the three Detroit pitchers and supporting Walters with three double plays and many remarkable individual stops and throws.

Walters struck out only two men, but he walked only two and with the help of his teammates kept out of serious jams. He retired the first five men he faced in order and after giving up a walk and a single in the second forced Birdie Tebbetts to ground out.

In the third when Dick Bartell doubled with one out and went to third on a fly, Walters made Charley Gehringer pop up foul to catcher Jim Wilson.

In the fourth, sixth and ninth innings Frank McCormick, Eddie Joost and Billy Myers helped out with double plays. The two errors had no effect on the game. In the eighth inning first baseman McCormick tried to beat pinchhitter Earl Averill to the bag after fielding a grounder and dropped the ball in a collision with umpire Lee Ballanfant and in the ninth Myers made a wild throw after a nice fielding play on a grounder by Gehringer.

Two Runners Reach Third

Only in the third and ninth did a runner get as far as third and in the latter case it was Averill who dashed across while the Red infielders were busy making a double play on two others.

The Reds' filling the bases in both the sixth and seventh innings netted only one run, but this lack of punch was their handicap all year and the fine fielding and pitching more than made up for it. Cincinnati's third run came during the sixth inning threat. Ripple and Wilson hit successive singles and Joost walked to fill the stations. Myers hit the first ball back at the pitcher and Gorsica threw to the plate to force Ripple. Then Walters came to bat and knocked a grounder at Pinky Higgins and Wilson was able to beat the throw to the plate. A double play ended this uprising.

In the seventh Mike McCormick led off with a sizzling single right between Gorsica's legs, went to second on a sacrifice, and, after another out, Gorsica loaded the bases with two walks, one of them intentional. However, Wilson grounded out to retire the side.

Expect Record Crowd

Every one of the Reds except Joost and Myers shared in the hitting spree and Werber's two safeties boosted his total for the series to ten, the most for any player on either club.

Only three of the Tigers managed to hit off Walters, Bartell and York getting two each and Higgins one. Bartell was removed for pinchhitter Billy Sullivan in the eighth.

After the game Wilson revealed he had pulled a muscle in his right leg racing home in the sixth, but he said he expected to be able to play in tomorrow's finale.

Tickets for the last game went on sale immediately after today's tussle and a capacity crowd was expected. Clear weather was anticipated.

Louisville Trims Bears

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 7 (AP)—Cecil (Tex) Hughson, lanky right hander, pitched the Louisville Colonels back into the running in the 1940 Little World Series tonight with a 6 to 2 victory over the Newark Bears of the International League. Newark now holds a 3 to 2 edge in games in the best-of-seven series.

PITCHES AND BATS REDS TO VICTORY

Bucky Walters

The Cincinnati Reds are back on even terms with the Detroit Tigers in the 1940 World Series, thanks to Walters whose pitching and hitting were important factors in the Reds 4 to 0 victory yesterday. Walters in winning his second game of the series held the hard-hitting Tigers to five scattered hits and climaxed a brilliant performance by hitting a home run in the eighth inning for Cincinnati's fourth run of the game.

Notes on Sixth World Series Game

By JOHN FRYE

CINCINNATI, Oct. 7 (AP)—Win, lose or draw (and don't think the last isn't possible in this slightly eccentric world) this 1940 World Series has proved that Bucky Walters is a ball player.

It's been a long time since anybody saw a pitcher who could starve some of the best sluggers of the Major Leagues, field like a farmer bringing in the harvest, and top it off with a home run. Bucky done it.

Today was the last chance for either Manager Bill McKechnie of the Reds or Del Baker of the Tigers to announce after the game, "tomorrow's another day." It was Del's turn today.

Before the game Baker put on a serene smile at the thought of how far his Tigers had gone without the 91 chattels emancipated by Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis.

Del is as high as ever on Floyd Giebelf, from Pennsboro, W. Va. The rookie pitcher who clinched the pennant for the Tigers up in Cleveland.

"He may never pitch another game like that," said Del, "but he won't have to. He's got poise if he never had anything else. He'll come along."

Bill Weber, the Reds' hot stuff at third base, has his own explanation of why he and Pinky Higgins, the Tigers' same, have been so busy.

"In a tight series like this," Bill said, "everybody's so anxious that they're hitting a little ahead of the ball and that sends it down our way."

Bill also had little sympathy for certain gentlemen who, he was told, closed their eyes and prayed when he fielded a ball in his typical style—reading the trademark before lining it to Frank McCormick at first.

"The runner's just as out by two steps as by fifteen," he observed.

Scalpers were standing in front of the downtown hotels with their tongues hanging out. Some were glad to get carfare home out of the day's business. At the park one woman gave away a good box seat before she went in.

Rudy York got his sports confused and pulled the "statue of liberty" play on Ival Goodman's schoolboy hopper in the first. Werber knew it was football weather but stuck to baseball and scored from third.—

Cincinnati isn't where Schoolboy Rowe got his education.

Frank Lane, the Reds' farm chief, carved out the best understatement of the series as the Reds took the field to start the game.

"If we don't win today," said Frank shrewdly, "the series is practically over."

Averill sent a grounder to F. McCormick back of first and the first beseman tried to beat the runner to the bag, ending in what appeared to be a deadheat and then colliding with umpire Ballanfant outside the base line and dropping the ball as both men fell to the ground. The umpire ruled Averill safe and there was a long argument, followed by a conference between Ballanfant and Ormsby which ended with the runner still on the bag. LEADING HITTER IN WORLD SERIES

Bill Werber

Werber a fellow who two years ago was waived out of the American League is one of the brightest stars of the present World Series. The Cincinnati third baseman is not only the leading hitter on both teams but his work at third base has been sensational. In the crucial sixth game yesterday, Billy started two double-plays on balls which probably no other third-sacker in baseball could have made. The former American Leaguer has made 10 hits in 23 times at bat and is hitting 434 for the series.

Ohio Is Dressed For Murder For Its Game With Cornell

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

By JOHN LARDER

CINCINNATI, Oct. 7—The best football game of the year, east of the Mississippi and North of Mason and Dixon's line, now promises to be Ohio State vs. Cornell—and I wish to warn all hands along Cayuga's waters to batten down the hatches and heave her to on the starboard tack, for Ohio State is coming dressed for a murder.

That is all you hear in Ohio, and even the citizens in Illinois, Michigan, Indiana and other adjacent hot spots are spiking their local business for a couple of weeks to watch and see what happens when Ohio State gets mad.

More than two weeks to go, and they are holding their breath already. That's a nice foundation for a football game. If I can believe Mr. Red McQueen, a stalwart pilgrim from Hawaii, the fever has spread as far as Honolulu. Mr. McQueen tells be he is in this country ostensibly to investigate conditions among the starving farodealers, but actually to get as close as he can to the Ohio State-Cornell game.

"Molakolua!" exclaims Mr. McQueen, which seems to be a Hawaiian expression meaning "I hope nobody gets killed that can't be spared."

Maybe They Started Something

If they are talking about the game in Honolulu, then it may safely be said that Cornell and Ohio State have started something—at least, Cornell started something, by coming West last fall and stupefying the famous downtown quarterbacks of Columbus, Ohio, with a knockout victory over the team of teams, which is a bashful way they have in Columbus of speaking of the team of teams.

Other parts of the country are interested because, having observed Ohio State in defeat, they wonder what Ohio State can do in the way of revenge.

They are also interested because Ohio State and Cornell have a couple of great teams developing in 1940 and because the geographical friction between Big Ten and Ivy League is considerable.

Of course, the interest will die down to some extent if Cornell should lose meanwhile to Army or Syracuse, or if Ohio should blow to Duke to Northwestern or Minnesota, as can very possibly happen, but barring such anticlimactic transactions, the game is hot.

The last report from my operative on the Cornell beat has it that Mr. Carl Snavely, the mastermind of that parish, is viewing the issue with profound despondency. Decoded, that means that Mr. Snavely doesn't like the looks of things. Under his mournful influence, the whole town is going around biting his finger-nails and pricing tickets to Tahiti.

His Despair Professional

True, Mr. Snavely is not always reliable in these matters. A lot of his despair is professional, as seems to be the custom with Cornell coaches, betinning with Gloomy Gilmour Dobie. But undoubtedly Cornell feels apprensive.

And that is not the way things are in Ohio. They take the defeat of their team last year to be an act of sacrifice. They didn't expect it, and they are not going to stand for it.

A Columbus merchant, in Cincinnati for the world series, tells me that Coach Francis (shut-the-gates of-mercy) Schmidt will not retain his job if Ohio fails to inflict gruesome revenge on Cornell at Ithaca October 26. In other words, he's got to beat Cornell or he's out.

That seems a trifle fanatical, and very likely my informant is talking through his new autumn turban, but they do take their football hard at Ohio State and vicinity, and fanaticism is their favorite sport. There is practically nobody in the neighborhood who does not know fifteen per cent more about football than Coach Schmidt, though sometimes, to hear them tell it, that ain't much.

It's a safe bet that every one of Ohio State's 1,246,000 coaches (figures just released by census bureau) will be working in dead earnest, from now till then, to lick Cornell. That is what is in store for Cornell, and if you happen to be going by Lake Cayuga, pass the word.

Warren Wright Is The Outstanding Horseman of Year

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 7 (AP) — Warren Wright, who retired as a "big" businessman several years ago to devote his time to horse racing, is to receive Thursday night the thoroughbred club of America's award of "outstanding horseman of the year."

Wright, once president of the Calumet Baking Powder Company and a director of several big corporations and banks, most of them in Chicago, now devotes much of his time to the turf. His Calumet Farm, on the main highway between Keeneland race track and Lexington, is one of the show places in the Bluegrass country.

In Whirlaway, Wright has one of the top-notch 2-year olds of 1940.

Potomac State And St. Francis Will Play Here

First College Game Here in Two Years To Be Played Thursday Night

The first college football game to be played here in two years will be staged at Fort Hill stadium Thursday night with Potomac State of Keyser, W. Va., and St. Francis, of Loretto, Pa., clashing.

St. Francis, with a veteran team will be favored to defeat Potomac State as the West Virginians have been slow to hit their stride this season. The Catamounts have lost three straight games.

Of interest to Cumberland sports fan will be the appearance of two Cumberland boys on the St. Francis squad. They are both former LeSalle stars, Phil Carolan, 215 pound tackle and Franklin "Lefty" Loibel, 160 pound halfback.

Carolan has played quite a bit the last two years, while Loibel is making a strong bid for a regular position on the team.

"Bobby" Cavanaugh will referee the game with Johnny Long as headlinesman and Arthur Ramney as umpire.

Army-Cornell Game Is Headliner in East

Cadet Coach Is Going To Start Defensive Backs

Capt. Bill Wood Believes Cornell Better Balanced than Last Year

By BILL BONI

NEW YORK, Oct. 7 (AP)—The biggest game on this week's eastern football program will be played at West Point Saturday between Cornell and Army. But as far as Army is concerned, apparently, victory already has been conceded to Cornell.

That, at least, was the only interpretation which could be read into today's statement by Capt. Bill Wood, the Cadet coach, that against Cornell Army will start its four best defensive backs. In other words, his scouts' reports have shown it will be solely a question of Army's ability to hold down the score.

Wood told the New York Football Writers' luncheon that his scouts rated Cornell a better-balanced team even than last year's all-winning combination, with their running attack as strong as ever and their aerial game far stronger. He emphasized the ability of Hal McCullough and Lou Bufalino to pitch accurate passes on the run while faking sweeps.

Tulane, coming North to play Fordham after defeats in its first two games, still hasn't given up the ghost. The word from New Orleans is that Coach Lowell (Red) Dawson didn't find the proper backfield combination until the second quarter of the Auburn game last Saturday. Now, with Walt McDonald at quarterback, Bubber Ely at left half, Bob Glass and Fred Cassibry alternating at right half and Fred Gloden and Jim Thlebaut at fullback, the Green Wave may be ready to roll.

Referee Red Friesell, generally rated the best in the business, got off his chest a plea for standardization of football rules, notably so that kids in high school will learn the same game they will be called on to play when they get to college. He also pointed out there were, in all, eighty-one rule book variations between pro and college ball.

Frank Leahy, whose Boston College team plays Temple next after starting out by whipping Tulane, declared the Eagles are distinctly not a power team. Jim Crowley's former aide explained that, with the exception of 230-pound center Chet Glaudchuck and a 245-pound tackle, the club was compartively light and would win its games on speed, good kicking and good passing, the latter executed chiefly by 155-pound Charley O'Rourke.

Arturo Godoy Beats Dorazio

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7 (AP)—Arturo Godoy, the South American heavyweight from Chile, took the first step towards a third meeting with champion Joe Louis tonight by outmauling Gus Dorazio, of Philadelphia, to win a 10-round decision in a rough bout. There were no knockdowns.

The Chilean, with an eight-pound weight margin at 202, piled up a big advantage by fighting at close quarters and won the decision unanimously. Nearly 5,000 saw the fight.

Using the same crouching tactics that helped him go 15 rounds with Louis in their first meeting, Godoy outwrestled, outshoved and outhugged Dorazio in a slow bout that drew boos from the crowd at the end.

Dorazio, who had won his 11 previous fights, found it difficult to stop Godoy from landing hard lefts to the body in the clinches. Several times Godoy drew grunts by slamming home hard punches in the pit of the stomach.

Altogether the South American won six rounds. Dorazio spurted to take the fourth and tenth while two rounds were called even.

Star Gazers Win

The Star Gazers won a sweep victory over the Star Dusters in Potomac Edison Girls League games on the Savoy alleys.

NEWSOM CRIES AFTER VICTORY

Broken up by the death of his father a few days before, Buck Newsom cries in the dressing room after holding the Cincinnati Reds to three hits and giving the Tigers an 8-0 victory in the fifth game of the World Series at Detroit. "It was the hardest game I ever wanted to win," said Bobo. "I pitched this game for my dad and I hope he knows what I accomplished. I knew in my heart he wanted me to win."

CINCINNATI, Oct. 7 — Two outsiders have furnished all weeks of action on the major foot- the trouble.

ball fronts indicate that this is going to be a very tough season on practically everybody concerned. Some teams, highly regarded in the forecasts, already have fallen. Others, having hit an early peak, must hold it — or try to hold it — against rugged assaults through the next seven weeks.

In the midwest Minnesota, Michigan, Ohio State and Northwestern, and Notre Dame stand out — but are looking ahead for trouble spots now. Minnesota's defeat of Nebraska last Saturday was a sign that the Gophers are strong again, for Nebraska rightly is rated as one of the best teams in the country. Michigan, with Tommy Harmon, out in front, is off to a great start. Ohio State, beating Pitt and Purdue is rolling — and yet had an unexpectedly hard time subduing Purdue.

Minnesota doesn't play this weekend. Michigan shouldn't have much trouble with Harvard, for the crimson seldom clicks this early in the season. But Ohio State draws Northwestern, and the way Northwestern sloughed Syracuse last Saturday was a tip-off that Lyn Waldorf has something at Evanston this year since Syracuse is way beyond the pushover division. Notre Dame, with only one game behind it, takes on a terrific assignment against Georgia Tech in one of the week's most attractive games.

Cornell, rolling over Colgate, again showed the stuff that made it the best team in the East last year and figures to top Army and Syracuse. Ohio State will be at Ithaca and Snavely's young men will be under heavy fire. Boston college, unbeaten last year and with victories over Center and Tulane already chalked up, moves toward the Temple game on Saturday. The main test that Boston college faces —the way it looks from here — will be the Georgetown game. Georgetown was overlooked last year, yet it was unbeaten and was tied only by Syracuse, and this year comes swinging back with a world of power, as it proved against Temple.

In the South, Tennessee, with its two-touchdown defeat of Duke, has taken the lead in Dixie — but it will have to get by Alabama. That may prove a hazardous journey. Alabama hasn't yet had to turn on the heat but, along with Georgia Tech — which Tennessee doesn't play — it menaces the Vols' drive for the top spot in the South.

Southwest Is Stronger

The Southwest is stronger than it was a year ago. This is the toughest football league in the country in the sense that all the teams are so strong and well-matched. Texas A. and M., rated by many as the nation's best team, will have trouble moving through to another unbeaten season, although it slammed over Tulsa, 41 to 6 by way of showing that it hasn't wasted any time hitting its stride.

The weirdest we have belongs to the Pacific Coast. Along this far Western border the tangle is terrific. Washington has already been beaten. So have California and U. C. L. A. Southern California has been tied twice. Oregon and Washington State have both been tied. If you can locate a Rose Bowl party from this scrambled start you are 100 per cent magician. For the worst is yet to come. So far, the West Coast has taken quite a lambasting in an intersectional way. Duke and Tulane were rated among the tops in Dixie. Both have been beaten decisively — Tulane twice. Bob Neyland moves to the front again, but he still has good teams to beat.

Outside of Alabama, you can figure that neither Vanderbilt nor Kentucky will be easy marks. Vanderbilt's showing against a strong Princeton team was among Saturday's features. And you can slip a few sprigs of wild laurel to Virginia for beating a good Yale team.

Army-Cornell Game Is Headliner in East

Cadet Coach Is Going To Start Defensive Backs

Capt. Bill Wood Believes Cornell Better Balanced than Last Year

By BILL BONI

NEW YORK, Oct. 7 (AP)—The biggest game on this week's eastern football program will be played at West Point Saturday between Cornell and Army. But as far as Army is concerned, apparently, victory already has been conceded to Cornell.

That, at least, was the only interpretation which could be read into today's statement by Capt. Bill Wood, the Cadet coach, that against Cornell Army will start its four best defensive backs. In other words, his scouts' reports have shown it will be solely a question of Army's ability to hold down the score.

Wood told the New York Football Writers' luncheon that his scouts rated Cornell a better-balanced team even than last year's all-winning combination, with their running attack as strong as ever and their aerial game far stronger. He emphasized the ability of Hal McCullough and Lou Bufalino to pitch accurate passes on the run while faking sweeps.

Tulane, coming North to play Fordham after defeats in its first two games, still hasn't given up the ghost. The word from New Orleans is that Coach Lowell (Red) Dawson didn't find the proper backfield combination until the second quarter of the Auburn game last Saturday. Now, with Walt McDonald at quarterback, Bubber Ely at left half, Bob Glass and Fred Cassibry alternating at right half and Fred Gloden and Jim Thiebaut at fullback, the Green Wave may be ready to roll.

Referee Red Friesell, generally rated the best in the business, got off his chest a plea for standardization of football rules, notably so that kids in high school will learn the same game they will be called on to play when they get to college. He also pointed out there were, in all, eighty-one rule book variations between pro and college ball.

Frank Leahy, whose Boston College team plays Temple next after starting out by whipping Tulane, declared the Eagles are distinctly not a power team. Jim Crowley's former aide explained that, with the exception of 230-pound center Chet Glaudchuck and a 245-pound tackle, the club was compartively light and would win its games on speed, good kicking and good passing, the latter executed chiefly by 155-pound Charley O'Rourke.

Arturo Godoy Beats Dorazio

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7 (AP)—Arturo Godoy, the South American heavyweight from Chile, took the first step towards a third meeting with champion Joe Louis tonight by outmauling Gus Dorazio, of Philadelphia, to win a 10-round decision in a rough bout. There were no knockdowns.

The Chilean, with an eight-pound weight margin at 202, piled up a big advantage by fighting at close quarters and won the decision unanimously. Nearly 5,000 saw the fight.

Using the same crouching tactics that helped him go 15 rounds with Louis in their first meeting, Godoy outwrestled, outshoved and outhugged Dorazio in a slow bout that drew boos from the crowd at the end.

Dorazio, who had won his 11 previous fights, found it difficult to stop Godoy from landing hard lefts to the body in the clinches. Several times Godoy drew grunts by slamming home hard punches in the pit of the stomach.

Altogether the South American won six rounds. Dorazio spurted to take the fourth and tenth while two rounds were called even.

Star Gazers Win

The Star Gazers won a sweep victory over the Star Dusters in Potomac Edison Girls League games on the Savoy alleys.

Ruehl spilled 346 pins for the winners while none of the losers were able to garner more than 200 odd sticks.

The Comets won two from the Shooting Stars in the same league with Boyle getting 299 maples. Hutcheson, of the losers, also made 299. The scores:

NEWSOM CRIES AFTER VICTORY

Broken up by the death of his father a few days before, Buck Newsom cries in the dressing room after holding the Cincinnati Reds to three hits and giving the Tigers an 8-0 victory in the fifth game of the World Series at Detroit. "It was the hardest game I ever wanted to win," said Bobo. "I pitched this game for my dad and I hope he knows what I accomplished. I knew in my heart he wanted me to win."

CINCINNATI, Oct. 7 — Two weeks of action on the major football fronts indicate that this is going to be a very tough season on practically everybody concerned. Some teams, highly regarded in the forecasts, already have fallen. Others, having hit an early peak, must hold it — or try to hold it — against rugged assaults through the next seven weeks.

In the midwest Minnesota, Michigan, Ohio State and Northwestern, and Notre Dame stand out — but are looking ahead for trouble spots now. Minnesota's defeat of Nebraska last Saturday was a sign that the Gophers are strong again, for Nebraska rightly is rated as one of the best teams in the country. Michigan, with Tommy Harmon, out in front, is off to a great start. Ohio State, beating Pitt and Purdue is rolling — and yet had an unexpectedly hard time subduing Purdue.

Minnesota doesn't play this weekend. Michigan shouldn't have much trouble with Harvard, for the crimson seldom clicks this early in the season. But Ohio State draws Northwestern, and the way Northwestern sloughed Syracuse last Saturday was a tip-off that Lyn Waldorf has something at Evanston this year since Syracuse is way beyond the pushover division. Notre Dame, with only one game behind it, takes on a terrific assignment against Georgia Tech in one of the week's most attractive games.

Cosnell, rolling over Colgate, again showed the stuff that made it the best team in the East last year and figures to top Army and Syracuse. Ohio State will be at Ithaca and Snavely's young men will be under heavy fire. Boston college, unbeaten last year and with victories over Center and Tulane already chalked up, moves toward the Temple game on Saturday. The main test that Boston college faces —the way it looks from here — will be the Georgetown game. Georgetown was overlooked last year, yet it was unbeaten and was tied only by Syracuse, and this year comes swinging back with a world of power, as it proved against Temple.

In the South, Tennessee, with its two-touchdown defeat of Duke, has taken the lead in Dixie — but it will have to get by Alabama. That may prove a hazardous journey. Alabama hasn't yet had to turn on the heat but, along with Georgia Tech — which Tennessee doesn't play — it menaces the Vols' drive for the top spot in the South.

Southwest Is Stronger

The Southwest is stronger than it was a year ago. This is the toughest football league in the country in the sense that all the teams are so strong and well-matched. Texas A. and M., rated by many as the nation's best team, will have trouble moving through to another unbeaten season, although it slammed over Tulsa, 41 to 6 by way of showing that it hasn't wasted any time hitting its stride.

The weirdest we have belongs to the Pacific Coast. Along this far Western border the tangle is terrific. Washington has already been beaten. So have California and U. C. L. A. Southern California has been tied twice. Oregon and Washington State have both been tied. If you can locate a Rose Bowl party from this scrambled start you are 100 per cent magician. For the worst is yet to come. So far, the West Coast has taken quite a lambasting in an intersectional way. The outsiders have furnished all the trouble.

Duke and Tulane were rated among the tops in Dixie. Both have been beaten decisively — Tulane twice. Bob Neyland moves to the front again, but he still has good teams to beat.

Outside of Alabama, you can figure that neither Vanderbilt nor Kentucky will be easy marks. Vanderbilt's showing against a strong Princeton team was among Saturday's features. And you can slip a few sprigs of wild laurel to Virginia for beating a good Yale team.

Medical Progress Shown In Auxiliary Report

$15,407.52 Raised in Six Years; Cancer Equipment Tops at Memorial Hospital

Medical progress in Cumberland was reflected in the report of the Memorial Hospital Auxiliary announced yesterday by Mrs. Howard L. Tolson, president.

The auxiliary has raised $15,407.52 since it was organized in 1934. Expenses have amounted to only $357.22.

The fact that Memorial hospital now has the best cancer treatment facilities between Baltimore and Pittsburgh is due to the hard work of the members. This equipment, including a deep therapy X-ray machine, cost $12,000 and was bought and paid for by the auxiliary.

No Longer In Dark

As explained by Dr. Frank M. Wilson, the deep therapy equipment enables physicians to X-ray deep, malignant growths that can't be reached with the diagnostic unit.

The diagnostic unit is adequate for X-raying the superficial growths. But the deep therapy unit, probing deeper, has enabled physicians to see where they were formerly in the dark. Using the deep therapy equipment, physicians screen off that portion of the body to be X-rayed, and often "shoot" their pictures from three, and four and sometimes five different angles. The result is a complete picture.

Prestige Increased

Use of this equipment has increased Cumberland's prestige as a medical center immeasurably, physicians aver. Today, cancer patients come to Memorial hospital from a wide area to take advantage of the institution's clinic and up-to-date equipment. A large number of these patients receive their treatment free.

While the cancer-treatment equipment has aided countless patients and even enabled many to stay alive, this has been only one phase in the program of the auxiliary.

Seven hundred dollars was recently spent for improvements in the pediatrics ward at Memorial hospital.

Clothing, Dressings Made

Eight members of the group have made 7,505 articles of clothing for use at the hospital. Three other women have prepared 29,475 dressings.

For several years, the auxiliary's big event of the year has been the annual Cancer Clinic Bazaar at the State Armory. The armory will not be available for the organization this year due to the military preparedness program contemplated by army officials.

Whether another bazaar is held this year is doubtful, auxiliary officers said yesterday. It would be difficult to stage the bazaar any place but in the armory, they say.

Local Group Favors Educational Program on Flood Control

Opposes Too Much Federal or State Control of Private Property

Members of the Potomac River Flood Control Survey, of Winchester, Va., who sounded out representative Allegany county citizens yesterday at the court house, were told that while any educational program on flood control was favored, that they did not want "any regulatory measures jammed down their throats."

The Winchester delegation, including G. A. Crabb, Thamas Lotti and Lawrence E. Kindt, made it clear that they were merely interested in getting the general opinion of Allegany county people regarding flood control, said a questionnaire would be submitted on the problem.

Encouraged by the questions of the Winchester group, Allegany county authorities discussed various phases of flood prevention proceedings including proper cutting of timber and soil conservation and cultivation methods.

The sentiment of the Allegany county group was that any educational program regarding the problem would be beneficial but that property owners are leery of too much Federal or State control of private property.

Allegany county people who participated in the conference included R. F. McHenry, county farm agent; H. C. Buckingham, district forester; W. L. Frazee, representing the Town Creek section; Liebau, W. B.&O. Will Pay Volunteer Workers for Registration

Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, in a statement yesterday, said all regular election workers who are employed by the B. and O., can volunteer their services to register men October 16 for conscription.

These employes who do so will be paid their regular wages for that day just as though they had worked.

Do you want to vote for president as well as other candidates? Do you want your neighbor to vote?

If you do, and of course you should want to vote and also see that your neighbor votes, then you must be properly registered in Allegany county to do so.

Every person residing in Cumberland and Allegany county and eligible to vote must be registered before the registration books close tonight at 9 o'clock. Today is the final day for registration and the various polling places in the county and city will be open from 9 a. m., until 9 p. m.

Those who must register are voters who have moved into another precinct since the last general election; who—in the case of women particularly—have changed their names since the last election, and those who will vote for the first time in November.

It should be made plain that unless you are properly registered you cannot vote Nov. 5, so if you are not certain about your registration better see about it today.

—o—

Cumberland men who will be eligible for military service under Selective Service act and who have been wondering how soon they might be called need not worry about being drafted before the middle of November, and the chances are that it will be later than that.

The draft lottery to determine the order for calling conscripts will be held in Washington, D. C., some time between Oct. 21 and 26. The exact date will depend on the time required for local draft boards to report through their state headquarters to Washington on the results of the registration Oct. 16.

After the drawing at least another five days will be required to print and distribute the "master list" of serial numbers.

The place at which a registered man's serial number appears on this list will determine the order in which the local boards will send him a questionnaire for information on his eligibility for service and also the order in which, if he is eligible, he will be called for a year's military service.

Thus with registration on Oct. 16, it will be the end of this month or early in November before the questionnaires are mailed.

Maj. Ben Howell, director of the manpower division of the Army-Navy Selective Service committee, says when a man registers he should use "utmost care" in giving his correct address. Failure to receive mailed draft orders will not be an excuse for not complying with the orders, he declared.

National guardsmen who resign when their units are called for service, he said, become subject to registration and conscription, just as other citizens.

Father Gives Blood To His Injured Son

Louis received compound fractures of the right leg and left arm and head and body injuries in his fall which brought police and dozens of volunteer helpers to his rescue.

The young LaSalle junior was saved from bleeding to death by the courageous work of Freddy and Bob Ruppert, who scaled the treacherous 100 feet from the top of the Leap to check the injured boy's flow of blood.

Police and their assistants required over two hours to bring Louis down from Wills mountain Sunday afternoon. Over a thousand people gathered at the foot of the mountain and Sunday traffic was choked up on Route 40 through the Narrows.

Medical Progress Shown In Auxiliary Report

$15,407.52 Raised in Six Years; Cancer Equipment Tops at Memorial Hospital

NEW MANAGER — Fred W. Chapman, formerly of the Lehigh Grocery Company, Allentown, Pa., has taken over the management of the Cumberland branch of the C. D. Kenny Company, wholesale grocers, of Canal street. He succeeds Richard G. Duvall, who resigned to accept the management of the Piedmont (W. Va.) Grocery Company. Prior to going to Allentown five years ago, Chapman was associated in the grocery business with the Merchants Service corporation and the Sprague Warner company, Chicago, for fifteen years.

Medical progress in Cumberland was reflected in the report of the Memorial Hospital Auxiliary announced yesterday by Mrs. Howard L. Tolson, president.

The auxiliary has raised $15,407.52 since it was organized in 1934. Expenses have amounted to only $357.22.

The fact that Memorial hospital now has the best cancer treatment facilities between Baltimore and Pittsburgh is due to the hard work of the members. This equipment, including a deep therapy X-ray machine, cost $12,000 and was bought and paid for by the auxiliary.

No Longer In Dark

As explained by Dr. Frank M. Wilson, the deep therapy equipment enables physicians to X-ray deep, malignant growths that can't be reached with the diagnostic unit.

The diagnostic unit is adequate for X-raying the superficial growths. But the deep therapy unit, probing deeper, has enabled physicians to see where they were formerly in the dark. Using the deep therapy equipment, physicians screen off that portion of the body to be X-rayed, and often "shoot" their pictures from three, and four and sometimes five different angles. The result is a complete picture.

Prestige Increased

Use of this equipment has increased Cumberland's prestige as a medical center immeasurably, physicians aver. Today, cancer patients come to Memorial hospital from a wide area to take advantage of the institution's clinic and up-to-date equipment. A large number of these patients receive their treatment free.

While the cancer-treatment equipment has aided countless patients and even enabled many to stay alive, this has been only one phase in the program of the auxiliary.

Seven hundred dollars was recently spent for improvements in the pediatrics ward at Memorial hospital.

Clothing, Dressings Made

Eight members of the group have made 7,505 articles of clothing for use at the hospital. Three other women have prepared 29,475 dressings.

For several years, the auxiliary's big event of the year has been the annual Cancer Clinic Bazaar at the State Armory. The armory will not be available for the organization this year due to the military preparedness program contemplated by army officials.

Whether another bazaar is held this year is doubtful, auxiliary officers said yesterday. It would be difficult to stage the bazaar any place but in the armory, they say.

Officers of the auxiliary other than Mrs. Tolson are Mrs. Walter C. Capper, first vice president; Miss Marie Holzshu, second vice president; Mrs. Richard T. Lowndes, secretary; Mrs. Hugo Keller, treasurer and Mrs. Joseph Lichtenstein, financial secretary.

Local Group Favors Educational Program on Flood Control

Opposes Too Much Federal or State Control of Private Property

Members of the Potomac River Flood Control Survey, of Winchester, Va., who sounded out representative Allegany county citizens yesterday at the court house, were told that while any educational program on flood control was favored, that they did not want "any regulatory measures jammed down their throats."

The Winchester delegation, including G. A. Crabb, Thamas Lotti and Lawrence E. Kindt, made it clear that they were merely interested in getting the general opinion of Allegany county people regarding flood control, said a questionnaire would be submitted on the problem.

Encouraged by the questions of the Winchester group, Allegany county authorities discussed various phases of flood prevention proceedings including proper cutting of timber and soil conservation and cultivation methods.

The sentiment of the Allegany county group was that any educational program regarding the problem would be beneficial but that property owners are leery of too much Federal or State control of private property.

Allegany county people who participated in the conference included R. F. McHenry, county farm agent; H. C. Buckingham, district forester; W. L. Frazee, representing the Town Creek section; Liebau, W. H. Johnson and A. J. Fitch, the Evitts Creek area; William Loar and N. S. Yoder, Potomac Valley; Ernest Reid, North Branch; and J. M. Coddington, state leader in land use planning work.

B.&O. Will Pay Volunteer Workers for Registration

Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, in a statement yesterday, said all regular election workers who are employed by the B. and O., can volunteer their services to register men October 16 for conscription.

These employes who do so will be paid their regular wages for that day just as though they had worked.

Do you want to vote for president as well as other candidates? Do you want your neighbor to vote?

If you do, and of course you should want to vote and also see that your neighbor votes, then you must be properly registered in Allegany county to do so.

Every person residing in Cumberland and Allegany county and eligible to vote must be registered before the registration books close tonight at 9 o'clock. Today is the final day for registration and the various polling places in the county and city will be open from 9 a. m., until 9 p. m.

Those who must register are voters who have moved into another precinct since the last general election; who—in the case of women particularly—have changed their names since the last election, and those who will vote for the first time in November.

It should be made plain that unless you are properly registered you cannot vote Nov. 5, so if you are not certain about your registration better see about it today.

—o—

Cumberland men who will be eligible for military service under Selective Service act and who have been wondering how soon they might be called need not worry about being drafted before the middle of November, and the chances are that it will be later than that.

The draft lottery to determine the order for calling conscripts will be held in Washington, D. C., some time between Oct. 21 and 26. The exact date will depend on the time required for local draft boards to report through their state headquarters to Washington on the results of the registration Oct. 16.

After the drawing at least another five days will be required to print and distribute the "master list" of serial numbers.

The place at which a registered man's serial number appears on this list will determine the order in which the local boards will send him a questionnaire for information on his eligibility for service and also the order in which, if he is eligible, he will be called for a year's military service.

Thus with registration on Oct. 16, it will be the end of this month or early in November before the questionnaires are mailed.

Maj. Ben Howell, director of the manpower division of the Army-Navy Selective Service committee, says when a man registers he should use "utmost care" in giving his correct address. Failure to receive mailed draft orders will not be an excuse for not complying with the orders, he declared.

National guardsmen who resign when their units are called for service, he said, become subject to registration and conscription, just as other citizens.

Father Gives Blood To His Injured Son

Louis Lovenstein Reported "Holding His Own" at Allegany Hospital

Louis Lovenstein, 15, who fell 100 feet from Lover's Leap Sunday, was reported "holding his own" last night at Allegany hospital.

The boy's father, Hubert S. Lovenstein, of 821 Shawnee avenue, went to the hospital yesterday afternoon to furnish blood for a transfusion attendants said was necessary.

Louis received compound fractures of the right leg and left arm and head and body injuries in his fall which brought police and dozens of volunteer helpers to his rescue.

The young LaSalle junior was saved from bleeding to death by the courageous work of Freddy and Bob Ruppert, who scaled the treacherous 100 feet from the top of the Leap to check the injured boy's flow of blood.

Police and their assistants required over two hours to bring Louis down from Wills mountain Sunday afternoon. Over a thousand people gathered at the foot of the mountain and Sunday traffic was choked up on Route 40 through the Narrows.
